

HOUSE OF ASSEMBLY

Tuesday, 6 September 2022

The SPEAKER (Hon. D.R. Cregan) took the chair at 11:00.

The SPEAKER: Honourable members, I respectfully acknowledge the traditional owners of this land upon which this parliament is assembled and the custodians of the sacred lands of our state.

The SPEAKER read prayers.

Members

MEMBER FOR BRAGG, NEW

Mr Jack Andrew Batty, to whom the oath of allegiance was administered, took his seat in the house as member for the district of Bragg, in place of Ms Chapman (resigned).

Motions

STANDING ORDER 39

The Hon. P.B. MALINAUSKAS (Croydon—Premier) (11:03): I move:

That proposed alterations to standing order No 39 to add in the heading after the word 'Prayers' the words 'and Acknowledgement of Country and Traditional Owners', to insert after the words 'following prayers' the words 'and acknowledgement of country and traditional owners', to insert before the word 'Whilst' the words 'We acknowledge Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples as the traditional owners of this country throughout Australia, and their connection to land and community. We pay our respects to them and their culture and to Elders both past and present.' and to insert after the words 'Whilst prayers' the words 'and acknowledgement of country and traditional owners', be adopted.

The Acknowledgement of Country has become a practice that successive parliaments have had in place for some time. I acknowledge, Mr Speaker, that you have continued this tradition since you have occupied the chair. It is a tradition that I believe is utterly appropriate and enjoys wide community support.

During the course of NAIDOC Week, I foreshadowed that this change to standing orders should facilitate the permanent recognition of traditional owners at the commencement of parliament's proceedings in a way that is consistent not just with the best traditions of this parliament, not just with the best traditions of our state, but in the obviously held truth that the traditional owners of this land are worthy of recognition in the parliament's deliberations at the beginning.

The tragedy of gross inequity that we see across the nation in a range of material ways must be confronted. We know that the approximate disparity between life expectancy for Aboriginal men and women versus non-Aboriginal men and women is almost 10 years. We know that suicide rates are almost 80 per cent higher amongst Aboriginal people versus non-Aboriginal people. The breadth and the depth of over-representation of Aboriginal people in custody still waters the eyes of anyone who comes across those figures. These substantial inequities require substantial policy responses, and certainly I can affirm that this government is committed to investing effort, energy and resources into tackling those challenges in a material way.

Sometimes, I think it is unfortunate that we have a debate where acts of symbolism overshadow actions of policy reform to seek to address those inequities. I think we have to do both; I do not think it is an either-or proposition. We have to have the courage to both demonstrate that there is policy reform and acknowledge that symbolic change lays the groundwork and the political permission for those necessary reforms, particularly where they might be challenging or even controversial.

It is well known that I am an advocate of the Uluru Statement from the Heart. Our government has a policy to pursue that, both in terms of Voice and, of course, in terms of Treaty. This important symbol is one that the parliament has already adopted in practice but should now make permanent in recognition of what I think we all agree with, in this chamber in any event. I commend this amendment to the standing orders to the house; it is one that I hope enjoys bipartisan support.

Mr TEAGUE (Heysen) (11:08): I am pleased to indicate that the proposed amendment to standing order 39 will enjoy, I think, unanimous support. Certainly, I speak on behalf of those of us on this side of the house in indicating our support for the change. As I have reflected on now a number of times in the house, reconciliation certainly does involve a combination of substantive measures. It also involves the establishment of tradition, and sometimes that involves symbols and practices.

In relation to the Acknowledgement of Country, I emphasise both its substantive importance and the need for those of us non-Aboriginal South Australians to approach this topic with great humility and respect. I do not presume to bring the full knowledge, let alone the necessary standing, to speak on behalf of those elders of Aboriginal lands upon which we undertake our day-to-day lives, but I know that in the genuine expression of Acknowledgement of Country that we now see in all forms of public engagement, there is a step towards substantive and symbolic reconciliation.

It is important, and the formalisation through inclusion in the standing orders of what has been a longstanding practice is one that is welcomed by this side. In the course of my time in the chair, it was a particularly important aspect of the formalities of the role. I am glad to see that it has been continued informally, and now glad that it will find its way into expression in the standing orders.

We speak about both symbols and substance, and it is important at this time that we take the opportunity to reflect on some relatively latter-day symbols that have been added in terms of this chamber. On 3 December 2020, I was proud to preside over the first occasion at which the Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander flags were flown in the chamber. I am glad to see that they continue, and I think they will remain. That was, as members will recall, a significant occasion of substance in that it was the first occasion on which the Commissioner for Aboriginal Engagement, Dr Roger Thomas, came to address the House of Assembly on progress to that time on his work on further engagement and representation.

I also at this time advert to the necessary substance and pay tribute to the former Premier, the member for Dunstan, as Minister for Aboriginal Affairs for his work, together largely with Dr Roger Thomas and Aboriginal communities throughout the state of South Australia, towards the presentation to this house late in the last parliament of the Aboriginal Representative Body Bill. It represented the culmination of that work over several years and presented a robust and substantial pathway towards better representation, engagement, and real Voice to the public institutions including government. I was proud, as shadow minister now for Aboriginal affairs, to reintroduce a substantially identical bill in recent weeks.

As the Premier has adverted, these are matters of important substance as we move forward. I just want to take the opportunity once again, because I have done this before in the context of NAIDOC Week and other occasions recently, to reflect on the words of Dr Lynn Arnold AO in his address at the cathedral in May this year when reflecting on what reconciliation means. He quoted the author Ursula Le Guin who said, and succinctly:

You can go home...so long as you understand that home is a place where you have never been.

So it is that we need to understand that a reconciling homecoming would bring us to a different place from that where we had departed. It is so important that, as we work towards a better engagement and a thorough reconciliation, we keep those words in mind. With that short contribution, I indicate once again our support on this side of the house.

The Hon. S.E. CLOSE (Port Adelaide—Deputy Premier, Minister for Industry, Innovation and Science, Minister for Defence and Space Industries, Minister for Climate, Environment and Water) (11:14): I rise to of course speak in favour of this motion. I do so with a sense of optimism and pride in what is happening in Australia at the moment in our approach to recognition of our First Nations people, of Aboriginal people as we refer to in South Australia.

It is true that there are many challenges facing Aboriginal South Australians, and it is true that they are the legacy of the impact of the arrival of European culture, and there is much to be done to make things better and to make things fairer, but it is equally true that there is much cause to celebrate the existence and the longevity and the persistence of Aboriginal culture. We are very fortunate in South Australia and in Australia that we are able to lay claim to the oldest living culture being foundational to this land.

We have as a source of tremendous pride the strength of Aboriginal culture remaining despite the experience of colonisation, despite the terrible pain caused by the removal of children and despite the ongoing legacy of poverty, mortality rates and incarceration rates. What we have is a culture that has the tenacity to continue to shine despite the impacts of Western arrival, and that is something that very few other nations have.

Very few other nations are able to lay claim to even having First Nations people still active, and ours is the oldest living culture. That is an extraordinary point of pride for all Australians and South Australians. Therefore, rather than our narrative when talking about Aboriginal people always being one of recognising the sorrow and the pain, it ought equally be one of being grateful and celebrating.

We have the opportunity to do that when we acknowledge country at the beginning of events and still more when we have an Aboriginal person who is prepared to come and welcome us to country. That is a moment when the act of generosity of Aboriginal people is most evident—an act of saying, 'We didn't cede this land and we didn't really welcome the white people's arrival, but nonetheless we welcome your presence now and we welcome that we are sharing this land together.' The willingness of Aboriginal people to share culture, to share their experience and to share their pride is something that always impresses me and moves me when I am part of a Welcome to Country. It is what we do as a pale shadow when we acknowledge country at the beginning of events.

Simply acknowledging that we are on Kaurna land here, that we are on Aboriginal land wherever we set foot in South Australia, is not sufficient. It is important. It has meaning and weight, but it is not sufficient if we are truly to embrace reconciliation with Aboriginal people. We also need to fully incorporate the recognition of the distinct cultural importance of Aboriginal people in the history of South Australia through the act, as it has been known following the Uluru Statement, of Voice, Treaty, Truth.

We have as a nation an important moment coming up: the moment of the referendum. When I acknowledge country at the beginning of speeches, until relatively recently, if someone had already acknowledged country at the beginning of a meeting, I might make a small reference, but I did not choose to restate my own personal acknowledgement of country; I have changed that recently. I have changed that because it is important to me to be part of that celebration and acknowledgement but also because I want to use it as an opportunity to remind us all that the referendum that is coming is a moment for all of us. It will be difficult and there will be things that are said that will be hurtful.

There will be things that are said that will cause pain to individuals, and it is the responsibility of all of us to make this referendum as respectful as possible and a step towards true reconciliation. That means that there can be no bystanders, that this moment of the referendum is not about Aboriginal people defending their right to be heard. It is about all of our opportunity to stand shoulder to shoulder with our Aboriginal brothers and sisters to acknowledge the truth of their presence on this land for tens of thousands of years before Europeans arrived.

The referendum will be challenging, and I do not know if it will be successful. It will be more likely to be successful if both sides of parliament support it at the federal level, and I wait daily to hear what the federal Liberal Party's decision will be on that. It will be even more likely to succeed if everyone who has ever had a passing thought of how special it is to be part of Australia because Aboriginal people were here for tens of thousands of years, if every person who has that sentiment, every person who has a view that reconciliation is probably a good thing for a nation that has an original stain of taking land without settlement, decides that this is our opportunity to step forward, to truly acknowledge and recognise.

We will have a version of that in South Australia—different conditions, not a requirement for a referendum, but equal certainty that it is through Voice, Treaty, Truth that we will see progress for not just Aboriginal people but for all of us to truly reconcile to what it means to be South Australian.

When I have travelled overseas over the years, I have occasionally felt uncomfortable about the views that people have about what Australians are like—once in the form of a taxidriver in France thinking that our harsh border restrictions on people who arrive by boat were spot-on and he wished they could do more of that, but more frequently a view that somehow we, as Australians, are not the colonisers but the colonised, a sympathy from people who have been colonised by Britain that we Australians must feel the same way.

Yet it is far more complex than that because we have never fully resolved that relationship between the Europeans who arrived later and the Aboriginal people who came first. It is only through that reconciliation and the pathway that is offered by Voice, Treaty, Truth that we will be able to fully embrace pride in being Australian, in my opinion.

I recently had an opportunity to go to the Far West Coast and into a bit of the APY lands with the Attorney-General. It was a remarkable trip for me. I had been before to some but not all of the places we went to. I had been to Pipalyatjara before as education minister, and I was pleased to see people there who had been there a few years ago when I last visited. But to go with Kyam was an absolute honour, and it demonstrated to me the importance of demonstrating pride in Aboriginal culture and recognition of contribution, and celebration of having the first Aboriginal member of parliament, not only in our parliament, not only Attorney-General but, if you look at his business cards first, Minister for Aboriginal Affairs.

He will require our support as we go through the process of Voice, Treaty, Truth. There are many expectations on him and he will require all of us who believe that this is the pathway to true reconciliation to stand with him and support him in the arguments, the debates and the discussions that occur and, I hope, in the celebration of a significant step forward. Spending time with elders, in Pipalyatjara in particular, in the far west of the APY, being shown Tjukurpa, the Dreaming of the Warru (the wallabies), and active generosity by the elders to share those dreamings with those of us who are not Aboriginal, was a reminder of the strength of Aboriginal culture that traces its way back yet also looks forward.

When I listened to the elders talking about the circularity of life and the importance of caring for the environment around us, they could have been modern-day environmentalists. The language was slightly different, but the sentiment was the same. This is how Aboriginal people lived in this land for time immemorial. This is how they did not run it into the ground within a couple of hundred years of arrival. It was a recognition of the connection between people and place that I think we more recent arrivals are struggling to reach but earnestly want to, and Aboriginal people and Aboriginal culture offer us that pathway.

We in this place can do what we can through legislative change, as we will—and I look forward to the legislation that Kyam will be bringing forward on Voice, Treaty, Truth—but we also do it through our daily acknowledgement that the land we are meeting on is Kaurna land. We have done it for some time. I think Frances Bedford was the one who pushed that we should do that daily and not just at the beginning of the week. I think it is a significant moment that we are choosing now to say that this becomes part of our standing orders.

I do not have religion. I sit and listen to the prayers each day out of respect for the role that Christianity has played in the heritage of our Western culture and its importance to many people who sit in this parliament, but it does not mean anything personally to me. I think we can all agree that a recognition of Kaurna land is of meaning to every South Australian. For that reason, I very much support this motion.

The Hon. N.F. COOK (Hurtle Vale—Minister for Human Services) (11:26): Naa marni. Ngai nari Nat Kartanya Cook. Marni ngadlu tampinhi. Ngadlu Kaurna yartangka tikanthi.

I have personalised an acknowledgement out of respect for Kaurna people and show my respect for their custodianship of this land for well over 60,000 years. The acknowledgement of that custodianship and the journey forward, as demonstrated by both our Premier and the Prime Minister in their election speeches in that Aboriginal affairs were the first things spoken about, is really a huge step forward in terms of our community and our preparedness to have a conversation about the history and the future of Australia and how we want our community to be seen.

The motion now, as our Deputy Premier has described, builds on a journey of initially starting to acknowledge country on the first sitting day of the week, then moving, under the urgency of Frances Bedford, to the Acknowledgement of Country every sitting day. To now embed this as part of our standing orders moving forward is another huge step forward and a signal to the community that we, as a parliament, are prepared to have a conversation that embeds this into our community as normal, something that should be acknowledged frequently, often and sincerely.

My team, the senior team in my office and my department, gathered together only a few weeks ago and spent an afternoon with Jack Buckskin. It was an incredibly meaningful and informative experience for us, where we talked and learned about the deep history and tradition that is the Kurna people. We talked about language as part of that, and I learned an incredible amount about how the First Nations peoples, our brothers and sisters, do appreciate the effort that people put into learning language and expressing an acknowledgement from the heart.

That acknowledgement I gave at the start of my contribution is one that I give from my heart, an acknowledgement of traditional owners' country. When I am attending an event, when I am speaking to a group of people, I do that acknowledgement and I also qualify my value set in regard to Kurna land and how Kurna land has been stolen: this land has not been ceded; we have not acknowledged that, and we need to in my view. The journey forward in terms of Truth, Treaty and Voice will be one of exposure regarding those values and how we should commit to traditional owners this respect and the acknowledgement of land and country.

I have watched countless times Her Excellency the Governor, the Hon. Frances Adamson, deliver her personalised, heartfelt Acknowledgement of Country in beautiful Kurna language. I am slightly jealous of her ability to be able to eloquently say her acknowledgement but also use the Kurna language so traditionally and beautifully. I will endeavour to improve my own enunciation over time, and perhaps even develop further skills in terms of the use of language, to deliver heartfelt messages to my First Nations brothers and sisters.

I think language is how we talk to ourselves, it is how we communicate to ourselves in our own heads. It is an important way to express ourselves to the world and to our community around us. Every word, and the way we combine our words, are an expression of our history, an expression of the history of the people who developed our language. It is a tragedy that so much of Australia's history is littered with the attempts to ban the use, suppress the use, and to destroy Aboriginal language and culture. I have heard this from many elders and Aboriginal brothers and sisters, that this has been such a traumatic experience over time, and for that I send my heartfelt apologies. Language is a beautiful thing and language should never be suppressed like that.

There is great shame in our history, in what we have done to people. This parliament and all parliaments around Australia played roles in passing what were innately racist and cruel laws that caused deep harm to Aboriginal people and Aboriginal communities. The motion today is a small but very important step in a journey, a journey in ensuring that this simply does not happen again. No country can genuinely plan for its future without acknowledging the past, and I acknowledge our past and the journey here and those terrible things that have happened in the past to First Nations people. This is why our standing orders should be changed to properly reflect the importance of the Acknowledgement of Country.

I also acknowledge my dear friend Kyam Maher in the other place and his role in ensuring that we as a caucus and we as a parliament have a lens of Aboriginal people across the legislation and the discussions we have. I acknowledge all of our community groups and people who ensure that we do have the opportunity to contribute Aboriginal Voice. I look forward in anticipation to the embedding of Truth, Treaty, Voice in everything we do moving forward.

I look forward to a day when potentially, Mr Speaker—not to undermine or play down the fabulous role that you are playing in the chair—we will have an Aboriginal person sitting as Speaker in this place, sitting as that authority and the arbiter of the rules of the parliament of the people. I think that would be an incredible achievement. It is shameful that something like that has not happened yet. I think it is up to all of us as a community to work on that happening and to ensure that we encourage people from Aboriginal nations and, of course, all other communities—diverse communities—to participate in parliament at the highest level.

The acknowledgement that we are putting into standing orders is standard wording, just like the prayer is standard wording. I echo the thoughts of the Deputy Premier when she says those of us in this place who do not practice a religion of sorts do sit respectfully and acknowledge the role that Christianity and, indeed, many faiths have played in the evolution of our community. It is why we also must have an Acknowledgement of Country in there.

As I said before, the best acknowledgement comes from the heart. I encourage members, if you have not had the opportunity, to participate in a language session and discuss really what that acknowledgement means and can mean from your heart—to reach out to do so. There are many people now who are doing cultural classes. It is an excellent experience.

As the standard words are being read, I would also encourage members to think and give their own acknowledgement in their own voice, in their own language, inside themselves—to find words that express your Acknowledgement of Country and offer them up every time we gather in this place. I commend the motion to the house. Ngaityalya.

The Hon. L.W.K. BIGNELL (Mawson) (11:36): I also rise to support this motion. There are many things that countries and nations are judged upon. As someone who lived in Europe in the mid-nineties and was overseas in the past month or so, the question that quite often comes up is about how we treat Indigenous Australians. I have to say in the 1990s it was a pretty embarrassing question to get. There were not a whole lot of positives we could put on it. Even in recent years, when you look at the incarceration rates, when you look at the quality of life, when you look at the longevity of people's lives, when you look at the health differentials between Australian people there is nothing really there to be proud of, despite lots and lots of work.

But having been overseas in the past few weeks, when I have been asked that question I have been able to point to things that are happening at the federal government level and also here at the state government level and for once am filled with pride that we are at least on a trajectory heading in the right direction to look after, to support, to recognise and to include Aboriginal Australians in things we do as a society. It is important that we set those examples right here in our parliament where laws are made that affect all members of our society.

I would also like to pay tribute to Kyam Maher, our Minister for Aboriginal Affairs and our Attorney-General, for the insight he has given to so many of his colleagues. When he went off to do business a few years ago, it was up to the upper house to grant him approval not to be at parliament—because if you are not here for a certain number of days you can actually lose your seat in this place—and it was done with the cooperation of the Liberal government at the time, the Labor opposition and the crossbench.

What I found extraordinary about that was how little I knew about the initiation process. I found myself being at functions with Pauly Vandenberg or Uncle Moogy, and I would say, 'How's Kyam going?' and they would say, 'He'll be right, brother,' and they reassured me. It was through Kyam's experience—where I know he learnt a lot, and there is a lot he cannot talk about because of the traditions that are there—that we all learnt a lot, not directly, necessarily, because Kyam could not tell us what he went through, but we could see in him a profound change.

I think that the more enlightened we can become, the more understanding that we can provide, the better knowledge that we have, the better we are going to be as a society, and that has to be fundamental to everything that we do. I am really proud to be part of a government that has a state-based implementation of the Uluru Statement from the Heart: Voice, Treaty and Truth. For anyone who saw the process that Australians went through to come up with that statement, and then for it to be put on the backburner by the then federal government, it was a bit of a backward step (I could probably use some harsher words) for Indigenous Australians—to see, at the state and federal level, that we are prepared to do that.

There are lots of big things that we need to do; there are lots of important things that we need to do. As the Premier said, we need the symbolic as well as the major policy shifts. This Acknowledgement of Country that we do each day, enshrining that into the standing orders of this place, goes a long way to reminding us each and every day when we come in here just how important Aboriginal Australians are to our society and how much we need to do, as policymakers, as community leaders, in changing their life expectancy, changing their health outcomes, changing the way they are perceived in our society and how much stronger we can be as a state and as a nation by learning from the oldest continually surviving civilisation on this Earth. I commend this motion.

Ms HUTCHESSON (Waite) (11:41): I rise in support of this motion. Naa Maani, ngai nari Catherine Warooyoo Hutchesson Marni Napudni this house, Parliament House. Kurna Miyu ngadlu Kurna Yerta Tampruthi Ngaityalya. Are you all well? My name is Catherine Hutchesson and I am, in my family, the second born girl. I am glad you all came to Parliament House. We acknowledge the Kurna people, we recognise this land is Kurna land and I pay my respects.

I am proud to also be receiving language and cultural lessons from Uncle Tamaru, an elder who is local to my community. We talk often, and he rings me often and catches me out if I do not know what to say when he greets me. I appreciate all the work that he is doing with both myself and the member for Adelaide as we work towards reconciliation.

Acknowledging the past and paying respects to those whose land it is on which we walk is one way we continue to walk side by side towards reconciliation. At most events, meetings, school assemblies, no matter where you are, it is now unusual if you do not hear an Acknowledgement of Country, or, if you are fortunate enough, a Welcome to Country.

My electorate of Waite sits within the lands of the Kurna people, but we share boundary and trading areas with the Peramangk people of the Adelaide Hills. I recently took a history tour of Belair National Park. Belair National Park was originally called Piradli. We were told that it was an important place for travel, trade, shelter and ceremony, both between the Kurna people and the Peramangk people of the Adelaide Hills.

In particular, they used the area for a lot of its resources, such as resin and bark, and possums and bandicoots were also hunted for food and their skin. Some places in Belair still retain their Kurna names. There are three ridges: Willa Willa, Yulti Wirra and Warri Parri. I currently live on Warri Parri Ridge. There are also many creeks that flow through Belair: Minno, Workanda, Tarnma, Kurru, Karka and Tapurroo. I spent many years of my childhood, with wellingtons up to my knees, walking through Minno Creek.

There are many in my community who are passionate about reconciliation. We even have our own reconciliation group. This group works to educate and share their understandings with our community. It began in 1994 as a Blackwood Library study group, and over time it has grown to be a strong group of advocates who meet regularly to talk about reconciliation.

In 1944, in my electorate, Colebrook Home was established. It had been operating previously in Quorn. The children placed at Colebrook included those who had been forcibly removed from their parents by government officials. Some were placed there by their traditional mothers or by their non-Indigenous fathers because they could not take care of them. Those who had been taken from their families by non-Indigenous people to work for them, and then rejected, were also placed there.

Once the children had been admitted to the home, it was almost impossible for them to be removed. By 1950, more than 50 children were in residence. Children were schooled in the house, but in 1953 they were allowed to attend Blackwood Primary School. I have heard stories about how these children used to walk through our Shepherds Hill reserve on their way to school. In 1972, the number of children had diminished and they were moved to a cottage across the road. I recently met the family who now lives in that house, and they have done their own research as to what went on there.

During its existence, Colebrook was home to over 350 children. One of the youngest brought there was one-week-old Avis Gale from Ceduna. She was taken away from her mother by the Aboriginal protection board. After the closure and demolition of the house, a number of former residents came together to form Colebrook Tji Tji Tjuta—my pronunciation may not be correct, so I apologise.

In conjunction with the Blackwood Reconciliation Group, this group secured funding to erect a memorial at the site. It serves as a monument to remember the children who went through the home. Colebrook Park is now a sacred space; it is where local people and children can visit and learn about what happened there, to be informed about stolen generations and to pay their respects.

Every year, the Blackwood Reconciliation Group holds the Blackwood Reconciliation Walk. This year, I was fortunate to attend it with the member for Hurtle Vale as well as the member for Boothby. It was a beautiful day and stories were shared and a documentary called Colebrook: A Place of Healing and Learning was screened.

I was fortunate to have seen the documentary a few weeks prior, and I would have to admit—and I have done so before in this house—that I had no idea, growing up in the electorate, of all that went on at Colebrook. I am not alone, though; many people do not know what went on in Colebrook, and many people across our country do not know what happened to Aboriginal people. It is really important that, as we walk towards reconciliation, we educate and talk about what happened.

Nowadays at Colebrook the former residents hold camp fire gatherings for adult groups and school and university students. They share their stories and achieve reconciliation through the creation of compassion and empathy. There is still a lot to do to educate our communities about the history of how Aboriginals were and still are treated. Acknowledging, when we meet in this place, that the land we meet on is and always will be Aboriginal land is a small but significant step in the right direction. It shows true leadership in the spirit of reconciliation.

There is much healing to be done for the Aboriginal community but also for everyone. At a recent Blackwood Reconciliation Group meeting I attended, there was another documentary shown. It was called Close to the Bone and addressed the legacies of frontier violence. One of our Blackwood Reconciliation Group members, Mike Brown, whom the documentary follows, along with the co-writer, director and producer of the documentary, Jared Thomas, presented the film and hosted a discussion afterwards.

The film was incredibly powerful. It tells the story of James Brown, a young shepherd who was murdered and mutilated in the Flinders Ranges, and how police and European settlers formed a reprisal party that killed many Aboriginal people in retaliation. In the film, Mike Brown reached out to the Aboriginal communities and descendants of those families after 170 years to find out what happened and to share memories, stories and forgiveness. Jared is a descendant of the Aboriginal people who were murdered.

The room, after the movie, was silent for some time. The film finished and everyone was processing what they had seen, not only the tragedy of the story but the tragedy that is the guilt that still survives within the generations now and how we still need to work together. I thank them for sharing this story with us. This morning, I presented the film as a gift to our Indigenous affairs minister, Kyam Maher, who is doing so much towards helping us reach reconciliation.

Reconciliation is about moving forward together, acknowledging the wrongs of the past and committing to a better future for all. We all need to listen to each other, share the truth, tell stories and commit to work in partnership. Our government has an ambitious agenda in Aboriginal affairs. We are committed to a state-based implementation of the Uluru Statement from the Heart: Voice, Treaty, Truth, beginning with enshrining a First Nations voice into the South Australian parliament.

There is extensive consultation being led by the Commissioner for First Nations Voice, Dale Agius. Aboriginal people in our state will have direct input into the decisions made about them. This will be followed by restarting the Treaty process in our state and establishing a truth-telling process that recognises all aspects of the past.

We have also committed to funding more Aboriginal statues and monuments to help all our communities understand and recognise our history. Statues and monuments that recognise great South Australian leaders and heroes will help current and future generations understand the value and contribution of our Aboriginal community. Consultations are currently underway.

At Colebrook Reconciliation Park, we have several monuments that honour the children who were taken from their families and lands and placed in the home. The Fountain of Tears was created in 1998 by Silvio Apponyi and the Grieving Mother in 1999. These monuments continue to share stories of the past.

It was surprising to me on my first day in parliament to hear Her Excellency the Hon. Frances Adamson AC acknowledge country in Kaurana, and I agree with the member for Hurtle Vale that it was very impressive. She talks with heart, which I think really shows her commitment towards reconciliation as well.

Whilst my acknowledgement is definitely not as fluent or diverse as Her Excellency's, it is with heart and passion that we all speak and understand why this motion to acknowledge all Aboriginal people in our standing orders in parliament is so important. We should acknowledge the Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples as the traditional owners of this country throughout Australia and their connection to land and community. We should also pay our respects to them and their culture and to elders past and present. We should pass this motion and I commend the motion to the house.

Mr BROWN (Florey) (11:50): I will be very brief. It is with great pleasure that I rise to support this motion. As we stand or sit in this chamber surrounded by heritage furnishings and portraits of people from parliaments long past, and as we give tours of this building and show people things from the 19th century and how long things have been here, it can very much give people the impression that this is a very staid institution stuck in the past, but parliament is a living institution whose rules need to change over time to keep it relevant to our current circumstance. It also needs to always be keeping an eye on the future to make sure that we do what we can to assist South Australia to grow as a state and to achieve those things that are, I believe, its destiny.

Also, it is important that we look to the past and make sure that we keep those things that we do with an eye on the traditions of our state. We do that in terms of, as the Deputy Premier said, the Christian traditions of this state through the prayer that we have at the start of each day. I believe it is right and just and appropriate that we do that, but it is also extremely important that we recognise the culture that was here before there was a Christian culture in South Australia—the culture of the traditional owners of our land—and so I think it is absolutely right that we do that.

It also is right and correct, I think, that that acknowledgement comes before the Christian prayers, because that is a recognition of the fact that that Indigenous culture existed here before there was a Christian culture in South Australia. Along with, I am sure, everyone else in this parliament, I am very much looking forward to being part of the Voice, Treaty and Truth process that the government has underway and doing many things here that will assist the reconciliation process and moving that forward.

I certainly agree that what we are doing here today in making a very small change to the standing orders is not going to be earth-shattering in terms of progressing that reconciliation agenda, but I absolutely think it is important that we do so, and I think it is a very good step for this parliament to take. I commend the motion to the house.

Ms HOOD (Adelaide) (11:53): I rise to speak in support of the motion. Naa marni. Marni naa pudni. Ngai nari Lucy kudnartu Hood. Kurna miyurna ngadlu. Kurna yarta tampinthe ngaitalya. Thank you for being here. My name is Lucy Hood and I am the third born in my family. I acknowledge that we are on the land of the Kurna people and pay our respects to elders past, present and emerging.

Learning Kurna language through lessons and culture with my dearest brother Tamaru, who is a Kurna elder, is one way that I feel that I can contribute to the journey towards reconciliation. When I am out and about in my community, to be able to speak the Acknowledgement of Country in Kurna is incredibly special. Whether it is in school classrooms, on parliament tours or at community events, I really do believe it is a symbol of respect and of the pride and appreciation that we have for our Aboriginal people and their culture, the oldest living culture on our planet.

When undertaking the Welcome to Country at citizenship ceremonies in Prospect in Payinthe, my dearest brother Tamaru calls up new Australian citizens to the stage. He tells us, 'We don't walk behind, we don't walk in front. We walk alongside each other.' From learning the Kurna language from Kurna elders, to an Acknowledgement of Country and having the traditional owners enshrined in the standing orders of this place, combined with a state-based implementation of the Uluru Statement from the Heart: Voice, Treaty, Truth—to a referendum that is coming, these are ways in which we can walk alongside each other and take steps towards true reconciliation.

Our government believes in Aboriginal self-determination to guide and protect the oldest living culture on our planet. We are committed to recognising and strengthening our community's relationship with our Aboriginal history. We have committed to enshrining a First Nations voice in the South Australian parliament, so direct input can be made by Aboriginal people about the issues that affect Aboriginal people. We are currently in the process of establishing an advisory commission into Aboriginal incarceration rates.

I know the environment is close to the heart of many in my community, so to take better care of our country we are employing an extra 15 Aboriginal rangers and establishing a First Nations advisory group to speak directly to the minister for the environment. While some may describe our agenda as ambitious, I believe these changes are worth every single effort in our journey to ensure Aboriginal self-determination.

To my dearest brother Tamaru, to the traditional owners of this land: ngaityalya, my respect. I commend the motion to the house.

Mr HUGHES (Giles) (11:56): I, too, rise in support of this motion. It is always gratifying to see the strong support in this parliament for an initiative like this. Clearly, we have acknowledged country for some time and I think it is important that it is formalised through sessional orders. I am incredibly fortunate to have an electorate that is made up of a whole range of language groups: from the Adnyamathanha in the Flinders Ranges to the APY lands to the Barngarla on Eyre Peninsula and many others as well.

To have acknowledgement of the people who walked this land for thousands of years before we turned up I think is something that is worthwhile. A number of members have mentioned the importance of symbolism and have called to task those people who often try to use symbolism to conflict with substance. As the Premier said, there is no conflict: it is both. Symbols are important. We live in a nation and a world awash with symbols, so symbols are important, but substance is also important. The member for Heysen also made that point in a very strong way.

When I look at my electorate and I look at the issues of substance, the story that I get is that we still have a long way to go in this state and in this nation. I look at the APY lands. We talk about closing the gap, but in many respects we are not talking about a gap when it comes to the APY lands. We are talking about a chasm where people's lives are cut short by 20 to 30 years compared with those of people who live in many of the suburbs in Adelaide and other parts of regional communities. That is not a gap, that is a chasm, and it is an incredibly sad reflection upon our nation and our state.

People often say, 'The past is the past,' but the past is still with us. A globally famous Australian anthropologist, who cut her teeth on Central American and South American cultures, was the late Inga Clendinnen. When she turned her gaze to Australia and to the state that she lived in in Victoria, she was just staggered by what had happened during the wave of dispossession that occurred in this country.

She focused in on a particular area, and within a few short years 90 per cent of the traditional owners in that area were no longer alive due to various killings, disease, and the whole pain of dispossession and suppression. The scale of what happened in Australia and the magnitude of it is deeply disturbing. As a nation, we still have not anywhere near fully come to terms with what happened and the way that has cascaded down through the generations.

I am of Irish heritage. The English ruling class cut their teeth on Ireland before they then spread out to the rest of the world. The same practices—the killings, the attempt to suppress language and the attempt to suppress culture—were there all those years ago and then replicated in the parts of the world that the English ruling class took over. In many respects, we are still living with those consequences today. Symbols are important, acknowledgment of land is important, but the practical things that we will be doing and are doing as a state are worthwhile.

I have been on the Aboriginal Lands Parliamentary Standing Committee since 2014. I think it is way past time that an Aboriginal voice should be speaking to the parliament, not this standing committee. That is no reflection on the committee, but the idea that a bunch of Europeans visit Aboriginal communities and then make recommendations to the parliament has had its day. An Aboriginal Voice to Parliament will be powerful and a more direct way of hearing from people who have far more at stake than those people who are on the committee historically and at the moment.

There are a number of other good initiatives. Last year, I had the pleasure of being with some of our shadow ministers and the now Premier up in the APY lands. One of the issues was the unfolding consequences of that tragic set of circumstances when Gayle Woodford was murdered. Gayle's Law is an important initiative.

We were meeting with Nganampa Health in the APY lands and one of the important things is that Gayle's Law was passed, but the resources to go with it were not made available. It meant that in order to provide escorts for our nurses in remote locations, Nganampa Health and other health services would then have to eat into the resources that they had to deliver clinical and health services in the lands. To his credit, the now Premier said to Nganampa Health, 'We will fix that when we get into government. We will provide the resources so that you do not have to eat into the resources that you need to deliver the services that are so vital.'

One of the other good initiatives is the employment of 15 Aboriginal rangers. That is something we should seriously look at expanding and doing in a number of different ways, not just rangers. There is a whole raft of things that needs to be done in remote, rural and regional South Australia when it comes to enhancing our natural heritage and at the same time assisting our farming and pastoral communities as well.

I met with some people in Port Augusta who said that for some of the Aboriginal communities getting out on to land, doing stuff around feral animals, noxious weeds and a whole range of things would be an incredibly important starting point. That is something that we should look to support, but we should also look to enhance what we are now doing when it comes to Aboriginal rangers. It is an important initiative.

There are a whole range of other practical things that we are doing. Obviously, one of the big issues is the level of incarceration or the level of interaction between young Aboriginals and the criminal justice system. This is complex and I probably have some views about the potential proposed changes in relation to the age of criminal intent. I accept all the underpinning arguments when it comes to the change but, unless we are incredibly serious about putting resources into early intervention, the changes are not going to work, and I can speak from the strong regional perspective of Port Augusta, Whyalla and elsewhere.

We have to be incredibly serious about early intervention to provide those wraparound services for families, to provide those services for young people and early intervention and, if early intervention does not work, decent diversion strategies that have a record elsewhere of showing that it can make a difference in people's lives because we have to break this cycle. It is a tragic cycle. These are practical things that we can do, but they have to be informed by well thought-through policy. I recommend this motion to the house. It is a good motion, and it is good to see it formalised.

Ms CLANCY (Elder) (12:06): I rise today in support of the Premier's motion and thank him for introducing such an important and long overdue adjustment to our standing orders. I would also like to thank the Hon. Kyam Maher, Minister for Aboriginal Affairs, for his guidance, knowledge, experiences and leadership.

Last week, I visited Guardian's childcare and early learning centre in Daw Park and was given the opportunity to read a book to some very fun, funny and excited four year olds. The book was called Finding Our Heart and is a story about the Uluru Statement from the Heart but pitched at children. The children then sang a song to me in Kurna language. I asked them if they do an Acknowledgement of Country at the start of each day. The answer was yes. The ECEC my daughter attended before starting school also had an Acknowledgment of Country in their program every morning, and now we are following in their little bitty footsteps and finally making it officially part of our program each sitting day.

Acknowledging country is a crucial step on the parliament's journey to reconciliation. To acknowledge country is to acknowledge the exclusion of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people—centuries of exclusion from our history, exclusion from our curriculum and, for many years, exclusion from our democracy. To acknowledge country is to acknowledge the ongoing impact of colonisation and the disparities between Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islanders and other Australians. We must continue to not only acknowledge this exclusion and the continuing effects of colonisation but take meaningful and consultative steps to end it.

An Acknowledgement of Country also shows respect, reminding us of the connection the world's longest surviving culture has with the land and waters we call home. As a parliament, we must always acknowledge and respect Australia's Indigenous ownership and custodianship of Australia.

Our government has an ambitious agenda in Aboriginal affairs. We are committed to working in partnership with Aboriginal people and stand unwavering in our support for their self-determination. Our government will introduce a state-based implementation of the Uluru Statement from the Heart. By enshrining a First Nations voice into the South Australian parliament, Aboriginal people in our state will have direct input into decisions made about them.

Our government will also be restarting the Treaty process in our state and establishing a truth-telling process that recognises all aspects of our past. This is just the beginning. From the windy hills of Panorama to the jacarandas of Clarence Gardens, my electorate of Elder is Kurna Yerta and I knowledge their elders past and present. Sovereignty was never ceded. This land always was and always will be Aboriginal land.

S.E. ANDREWS (Gibson) (12:10): It is an honour to rise to support this motion for the introduction of an Acknowledgement of Country and traditional owners in the standing orders. I pay my respects to all Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people as the traditional owners of country. I recognise their connection to land and waters, and pay my respects to their beliefs and culture and to elders past and present. This is Aboriginal land—always was, always will be.

The federal parliament has been formally acknowledging our First Nations people since 2010. Many local governments, state departments and—as the member for Elder acknowledged—kindergartens also conduct an Acknowledgement of Country before their meetings and events.

For many of us, as members of parliament, attending citizenship ceremonies is very powerful and one of the favourite parts of our roles. It is where we witness an Acknowledgement of Country and see it through the eyes of new citizens to Australia—our newest Australians listening, before a very significant milestone in their life, to an acknowledgement of the culture that has been part of this country for tens of thousands of years.

We are fortunate in South Australia to have an Aboriginal man as our Attorney-General and Minister for Aboriginal Affairs. The Hon. Kyam Maher is a man of wisdom, heart and commitment to our First Nations people. This change to the standing orders is just a small part of the commitment to Aboriginal people by the Malinauskas Labor government, which I am proud to be a part of—a government that wants to walk alongside Aboriginal people, listen to them, support their ambitions for the future and deliver real outcomes that all South Australians can value.

This change to the standing orders will ensure that at the start of each sitting day the words, 'We acknowledge Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples as the traditional owners of this country throughout South Australia, and their connection to land and community. We pay our respects to them and their culture and to elders both past and present', will be heard in this house. We are lucky to live in a nation comprising hundreds of Aboriginal nations that have been protecting what we now call Australia for at least 60,000 years. I think many are too quick to forget the significance of this, especially compared to the mere 234 years that Europeans have lived on this land.

As a government, we believe in Aboriginal self-determination to guide and protect the oldest living culture on our planet. We are committed to a state-based implementation of the Uluru Statement from the Heart: Voice, Treaty, Truth. This process has started, with extensive consultations being led by the Commissioner for First Nations Voice, Dale Agius, currently underway with the South Australian Aboriginal community. Dale is another member of our community who we can be very proud of, and I know that these consultations will be honest, frank and meaningful.

That is the Labor way: listening, learning and acting. Whether it was the late Gough Whitlam in the Northern Territory in 1975, Paul Keating at Redfern in 1992, or Kevin Rudd in our nation's federal parliament in 2008, Labor prime ministers have shown our commitment to Aboriginal people. We now see the Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander flags behind our current Prime Minister.

Our Labor government is committed to restarting the Treaty process in our state and establishing a truth-telling process that recognises all aspects of our past. It has been four years since the last Labor government first started discussions with three Aboriginal nations, with our aim of finalising a Treaty paused by the election of the Marshall government.

A key part of Truth is understanding and recognising our history. If you do not know your history, you cannot respect, acknowledge and protect it. As a government, we are committed to Aboriginal statues and monuments that recognise South Australian Aboriginal leaders and will help current and future generations to understand the value and contribution of our Aboriginal community.

It is crucial that young Aboriginal South Australians see statues and monuments of members of their community so that they feel their past leaders and heroes are respected by our community. You cannot be what you cannot see, and if you cannot see your leaders and heroes alongside those in the broader community that does send a strong message that your elders are not valued in our society.

Consultations are currently underway with Aboriginal community members, and are being led by the Commissioner for Aboriginal Engagement, Dr Roger Thomas. This is important, because decisions cannot be made on who should be immortalised without true consultations with our Aboriginal community leaders, and it is only appropriate that one of the changes is an Acknowledgement of Country each sitting day in this house so that all members have, at the front of their mind, protecting the Aboriginal culture and working to improve the future for our Aboriginal brothers and sisters as we conduct our business.

Aboriginal incarceration rates are a national shame, and it reflects on every member of our community that we imprison so many of our Aboriginal people across our nation. Our government is currently in the process of establishing an advisory commission into Aboriginal incarceration rates. This is an important step for our government, as we know that across the nation the rate of incarceration is way too high.

Additionally, our government is undertaking to legislate to enshrine the Nunga Court as part of our justice system, ensuring that Aboriginal elders have a voice in sentencing offenders and in the healing of victims. The Nunga Court at the Port Adelaide Magistrates Court was the first culturally appropriate court for Aboriginal defendants in Australia and is the inspiration for the Aboriginal community courts that sit once a month at Adelaide and Elizabeth.

Quality education is critical in everyone's life, whether it be school, TAFE, university or just throughout our daily living, and that is why I am pleased that the Malinauskas Labor government has committed to transferring Tauondi College at Port Adelaide to Aboriginal control and ownership to help secure its future. We can all be proud that Tauondi College was the first place in South Australia, and only the third nationally, to deliver Aboriginal-controlled education for Aboriginal people.

Tauondi is a Kurna word meaning 'to penetrate' or 'break through'. Tauondi Aboriginal College has been breaking through to deliver vocational education and training since 1973. Tauondi Aboriginal College provides education and training for the whole person, upholding Aboriginal cultures and identities in ways that respect Aboriginal law and custom and the diversity of students' experiences and ambitions. Tauondi also provides a diverse and wide range of services to meet the ever-changing needs of Aboriginal communities in South Australia. We should be proud of Tauondi, its staff and students, and the work it does in the Deputy Premier's electorate for Aboriginal people across South Australia.

The government's agenda for Aboriginal affairs is extensive, and the next area in which this government is listening to Aboriginal people is in relation to the environment, one I certainly value, whether it be our stunning coastline or the Warriparinga and Oaklands wetlands, all of which I enjoy visiting with my family and dog. The Warriparinga wetlands offers natural beauty, including native plants and animals, and is a respected place for cultural and environmental education as well as being home to the Living Kurna Cultural Centre, which interprets Kurna culture and heritage. This site has one of the few remaining scar trees on the Adelaide Plains, and was a gathering place for Kurna people.

While the local Kurna people and the City of Marion ensure that Aboriginal heritage and this area is protected, this is not always the case across South Australia. That is why protecting Aboriginal heritage is a priority for this government. In consultation with local communities, Labor is undertaking to increase financial penalties for serious breaches of Aboriginal heritage laws so that penalties for destroying the past are not seen just as the cost of doing business.

Alongside the protection of Aboriginal heritage is the care for our country. Aboriginal people have cared for our country for tens of thousands of years. Through fire, flood, and drought management they have significant knowledge about the land and protecting our environment. That is why a Malinauskas Labor government is establishing a First Nations advisory group to speak directly to the Minister for the Environment, the member for Port Adelaide, and employing 15 extra Aboriginal rangers to better care for our country.

This initiative will not only see the crucial knowledge and understanding of our natural environment brought forward but it will allow Aboriginal people to work on their own country with local community groups, have their Voice heard, and bring positive change. Additionally, it will support culture, storytelling, and language, while ensuring the protection of the country for future generations. The government is further ensuring that Aboriginal voices are heard on the future of our River Murray. As we all know, the river is a lifeblood for our state, and holds significance for our Aboriginal communities.

As we all know, health is our most important asset, and sadly the health outcomes for Aboriginal people are far worse than for the rest of the population. This is not something that we should accept. We are working to improve the health of our Aboriginal people. Together with federal Labor, we are providing more than $15 million to give Yadu Health in Ceduna a new home, and additionally we are providing the required funding to Nganampa Health to implement Gayle's Law to help keep nurses and patients safe in remote communities.

I am proud to be a member of a government that has an ambitious agenda for Aboriginal Affairs covering many important areas, and finally listening to First Nations people. I commend the Premier's motion to the house.

Ms THOMPSON (Davenport) (12:21): It is my honour to rise to contribute to the debate regarding the introduction of an Acknowledgement of Country and traditional owners in the standing orders. I would like to start by paying my respects to all Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people in my electorate of Davenport, and across our state of South Australia.

We have not always got it right, but building respect is an important step towards reconciliation. We still have a long way to go in our country, and in our state, with respect to how we celebrate and acknowledge Aboriginal culture and our country's true history. I have been very fortunate in my career to have been able to engage deeply with some of our key elders in my community, and in the southern parts of Adelaide and across our state. In particular, I would like to acknowledge senior Kurna Meyunna woman Georgina Williams—Woman of Water—whom we very sadly lost last year.

Aunty was the first to take my hand and guide me to embrace our First Nations culture. She taught me the importance of upholding the cultural values of the traditional owners, to be open to truth telling, and she had begun teaching me some of the stories of the south. Aunty dedicated her life to activism, to fighting for land rights and for social justice, for her family, for her people and her culture, and the reawakening of the sacred Tjilbruke Dreaming story, so that her people could come home to country.

Her resolve was second to none. She maintained her path with unwavering strength and wisdom, and she always stayed true to her convictions with future generations in mind. She taught me and many others to listen in a deeper way, which has opened a new way of understanding this story for myself and many others. She also introduced me to her son, the senior Kurna man Karl Telfer. I am grateful to Karl for spending time with me and walking with me on country and teaching me about the land and about his ancestors. We need to encourage our community to embrace opportunities to engage with First Nations people, to learn more about country to protect the oldest living culture on our planet.

I am so proud to be part of a government that has an ambitious agenda for Aboriginal affairs. We are committed to working in partnership with Aboriginal people, to support their ambitions for the future, and deliver real outcomes right across our state, and a commitment to a state-based implementation of the Uluru Statement from the Heart: Voice, Treaty, Truth. The first step is enshrining a First Nations Voice into South Australian parliament. This will allow Aboriginal people in our state to have direct input into decisions made about them. I am proud to have led a similar approach in my former position as Mayor of the City of Onkaparinga, where we established a Voice to Council. It is pleasing to see that this is happening now across all levels of government.

The Voice to Parliament will be followed by restarting the Treaty process in our state and establishing a truth-telling process that recognises all aspects of the past. This will not be an easy process, but it is indeed an important one and so necessary. When I am speaking to my community of Davenport about this, I am hearing that there is an absolute hunger and thirst for knowledge and information about our country's Indigenous culture, particularly about the local stories. That is fantastic to hear and very reassuring.

Another commitment of this government that I am proud of is establishing a First Nations advisory group to speak directly to the Minister for Environment and employing 15 extra Aboriginal rangers. This is an extremely important step in taking care of our country.

A key part of Truth is understanding and recognising our history. Our government has committed to Aboriginal statues and monuments—statues and monuments that recognise great South Australian Aboriginal leaders and heroes that will help current and future generations to understand the value and contribution of our Aboriginal community.

I highly encourage people to learn about the Tjilbruke dreaming story by walking the Tjilbruke Dreaming Track, which is a significant ancestral journey along Adelaide's coastline. There are 10 cultural markers along this track which recognise the tiers of Tjilbruke that formed the natural springs, an integral part of the Dreaming story.

The Kurna cultural centre at Marion is a fantastic place to learn more about Kurna culture, and there is a great wall there that tells the Tjilbruke Dreaming story. I encourage everybody to get along and have a look at that. I am sure that if Aunty Georgina were still with us, she would be pleased to see the positive steps that our government is making, but she would be fiercely fighting for us to be even more ambitious in our progress. This is just one small step, but it is a step in the right direction. I commend the Premier's motion to the house.

The Hon. J.K. SZAKACS (Cheltenham—Minister for Police, Emergency Services and Correctional Services) (12:26): I rise in support of this important motion. In doing so, I also acknowledge that we gather today on the traditional lands of the Kurna people. I pay my respects to elders past and present. In a simple way I commend this motion in the sense that it creates a permanent statement and reminder of the importance of the work that we must do as a parliament and as a community to fully embrace reconciliation and move from a set of words to a set of meaningful actions. I am proud to be part of a government that is putting those actions in place and not just speaking about reconciliation but truly delivering it.

We are a government that in opposition fully committed to the implementation of the Uluru Statement from the Heart—that is, Voice, Treaty and Truth. I think most people in this chamber have at one time or another reflected on the profound nature of the work and consultation and consensus that was built through the Uluru Statement from the Heart, yet the truth is we are still as a country far from implementation of that consensus position that was reached. We now know that our new federal government, the Albanese Labor government, is committed to an Aboriginal Voice to Parliament.

I have to say it is truly disheartening to see a really deliberate and quick reaction in response to reject that from some pockets of our political leaders and from civil society. It should not fill us with any pride in this place that we have such lack of consensus from a political perspective nationally, when First Nations people were able to find that consensus to deliver to us, to policymakers, a very strong view around Voice, Treaty and Truth.

The first step in that on behalf of the Malinauskas government is enshrining a Voice to Parliament. That is currently being led through consultation by Dale Agius, a man known to many people in this place. He is an exceptional community leader and exceptional Aboriginal leader. I trust and am entirely confident that the work that Dale is undertaking will better inform the position contemplated by this place and the way that we truly enshrine Voice as part of our package of delivering Voice, Treaty and Truth.

I am also very proud to be part of a government that is starting to reinvigorate the Treaty process. We have lost four years. I hope we have not lost ground through the actions taken by the former government, particularly by the then Premier, the member for Dunstan, to abandon the Treaty process. I hope that the goodwill started by the then Labor government prior to 2018 is still there, and I trust that with the leadership of the Minister for Aboriginal Affairs in the other place that process will conclude in earnest.

The unfinished business that Australia has when it comes to reconciliation is profound. I rise to note, as the Minister for Police, Correctional Services and Emergency Services, the significant work that must be undertaken in my portfolios, as was raised by other speakers. In particular, I was in the chamber to hear the remarks of the member for Gibson that Aboriginal people still find themselves incarcerated at a dramatically higher level and higher rate than the rest of the community. That has to change. I will give the former minister, the member for Hartley, credit as well that there has been an approach of deliberate attempts to reduce Aboriginal incarceration, but more has to be done.

We also see in road trauma, whether it be deaths or significant trauma, again an over-representation of Aboriginal people in deaths on our roads. In our emergency services, more work needs to be done to have our emergency services, be it career staff or volunteer staff, better reflect our community, which means that our emergency services need to improve the way in which they market themselves or present themselves to First Nations people to, in turn, attract more Aboriginal people to join and serve in those services so that they may better reflect the community they serve.

All of this, of course, is through the great privilege that I have to share and sit around the cabinet table with the first Aboriginal man serving as Aboriginal affairs minister, that is, the Hon. Kyam Maher in the other place—a good man and a friend of mine. The privilege I have is to share in some of his immense knowledge, his deep cultural connection with Aboriginal people and at times his extremely infinite understanding, it seems to me, of the nuance. That is something I do not take for granted, and I know that my cabinet colleagues do not take for granted.

We are standing here today both in support of this motion and, as a government, delivering on a policy agenda that will firmly implement Voice, Treaty, Truth, standing shoulder to shoulder with an Aboriginal man who is an extraordinary role model to his community. In closing, I know this is a matter that is close to the heart of all in this chamber, and I commend the motion brought by the Premier.

The Hon. K.A. HILDYARD (Reynell—Minister for Child Protection, Minister for Women and the Prevention of Domestic and Family Violence, Minister for Recreation, Sport and Racing) (12:33): I am also really pleased and honoured to rise to speak in wholehearted support of this motion and, in doing so, I acknowledge that the land I live on, that we spend time with our community on and that we meet on today is Kurna land. I pay my deep respect to Kurna elders past and present, to Kurna future leaders and to elders and people of other Aboriginal nations with us in our community.

In acknowledging the land we meet on today, I acknowledge that this land always was and always will be Aboriginal land. I also acknowledge that there is still a long road ahead to genuine reconciliation, and I am really proud to be a member of a government that has already made commitments to progress genuine engagement with Aboriginal people in our community. I am also so proud that, as the previous speaker said, our brilliant Attorney-General and Minister for Aboriginal Affairs, lovely friend and leader, the Hon. Kyam Maher, is leading those efforts.

One of these important steps towards reconciliation, towards ensuring the voices of Aboriginal people are absolutely heard and acted upon, is to completely endorse what is set out in the Uluru Statement from the Heart. The first step in that is enshrining a First Nations Voice into the South Australian parliament. This will allow Aboriginal people in our state to have direct input into decisions made. Extensive consultations being led by the Commissioner for First Nations Voice, Dale Agius, are currently underway with the South Australian Aboriginal community.

The Uluru Statement from the Heart also calls on reforms to empower Aboriginal people to take their rightful place in their country, to have self-determination and to create change. The Uluru Statement from the Heart states:

Makarrata is the culmination of our agenda: the coming together after a struggle. It captures our aspirations for a fair and truthful relationship with the people of Australia and a better future for our children based on justice and self-determination.

Each of the three elements of the statement—Voice, Treaty and Truth—are equally important and all are vital interwoven parts of the necessary journey to implementing what is contained within the Uluru Statement. The Voice to state parliament will be followed by restarting the Treaty process in our state and establishing a truth-telling process that recognises all aspects of our past.

We have also committed to Aboriginal statues and monuments. A key part of Truth is understanding, recognising and honouring our history. Statues and monuments that recognise great Aboriginal leaders and heroes will help current and future generations to understand the value and contribution of our Aboriginal community. Consultations are currently underway with Aboriginal community members, and these efforts are being led by the Commissioner for Aboriginal Engagement, Dr Roger Thomas.

As Minister for Women and the Prevention of Domestic and Family Violence, I am passionate about the prevention and eradication of domestic violence. The domestic violence statistics that we continue to confront are appalling and they are a persistent, relentless call to action. Most recent statistics from the SAPOL annual report note that the number of domestic violence related assaults shockingly rose again this last year by almost 10 per cent.

What we also know about all the shocking domestic violence statistics is that they are significantly worse if you are Aboriginal and that there is a deeply disproportionate impact of domestic violence on Aboriginal women. We also know that Aboriginal women can be less likely to trust the legal and other systems. On every issue, Aboriginal voices must be heard and acted upon, including on the most pressing, devastating issue of domestic violence.

Our government is aware of the impacts of colonisation and past welfare policies on Aboriginal people. In speaking about that particular set of issues, I pay tribute to the strength, courage and resilience of Aboriginal people who were removed by past governments from their families. I am sorry for and acknowledge that these terrible injustices and hurt continue to impact many Aboriginal people and their communities.

Our government is resolutely committed to the Closing the Gap targets. For me as Minister for Child Protection, addressing the over-representation of Aboriginal children and young people in care is pressing. We will tackle this over-representation by having a dedicated plan with Aboriginal people, a plan that includes working with the Aboriginal children's commissioner to create an Aboriginal-led group to ensure that Aboriginal voices are heard and acted upon within the system, a plan that includes active efforts to ensure Aboriginal governance is embedded in everything we do and that Aboriginal led decision-making is a requirement for all decisions relating to Aboriginal children and young people.

We will ensure an expansion of the service footprint of Aboriginal community-controlled organisations working in this space. Commissioner for Aboriginal Children and Young People, Ms April Lawrie, has launched an inquiry pursuant to section 20M of the Children and Young People (Oversight and Advocacy Bodies) Act 2016 into the implementation of the Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Child Placement Principle in both policy, legislation and practice.

This inquiry is examining how the principle is applied in the removal and placement of Aboriginal children in out-of-home care. This is an area deeply important to this government, as we acknowledge the over-representation of Aboriginal children in out-of-home care and recognise that cultural safety and connection to community is fundamental to the wellbeing of Aboriginal children and young people. Commissioner Lawrie is an incredibly important and wise advocate and provides robust advice on the systemic issues that must be tackled to begin to reduce that over-representation of Aboriginal children and young people in care.

We are committed to working in partnership with the community and empowering the commissioner to create mechanisms for Aboriginal voices to be heard within and about the system. The inquiry is one such way that Aboriginal people will have a say and provide crucial insight and feedback that we need to improve the safety and wellbeing of children and young people.

I am deeply committed to ensuring children are at the centre of our decision-making and actions. I greatly value Commissioner Lawrie's advice and advocacy, and believe that the best outcomes for Aboriginal children and young people will be achieved if solutions are led and designed by Aboriginal children, families, leaders and communities. This inquiry into the child placement principle will be a powerful way of doing just that. We welcome it and the way in which the commissioner has indicated she intends to conduct it.

To achieve real change we must shift public discourse and grow community understanding about the deeply interconnected issues that impact families and the ongoing need to balance doing all we can to strengthen families so that they have the best chance of succeeding and keeping children and young people safe. Again, I commend this motion to the house and I am proud to rise in support of it.

Ms WORTLEY (Torrens) (12:42): I am proud to rise in support of our government's commitment to South Australia's First Nations people and the way in which we acknowledge them as the custodians of the land. In doing so, I acknowledge Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people as the traditional owners of this country throughout Australia and their connection to land and community. I acknowledge also that today this parliament meets on the traditional land of the Kurna people, and I pay my respect to their elders past, present and emerging, as together we walk along the path of reconciliation. I also make special mention of the First Nations people in my electorate of Torrens and the leaders who work so hard to bring community together.

I am proud to say that we as a parliament are enshrining the need for this acknowledgement before us at the opening of our assembly every time we sit. This is an important milestone in our history. This measure speaks to the very meaning that the Uluru Statement of the Heart talks about: Voice, Treaty and Truth. It is also Labor's commitment to deliver on this, as we believe in Aboriginal determination to guide and protect the oldest living culture on our planet.

The changes to the standing order we hope to enshrine this week go some way to helping preserve that voice and make us accountable to the people as a role model to everyone. The first step we are making as a government is to have a First Nations voice into the South Australian parliament, which is an exciting development. It will allow First Nations people in our state to have direct input into decisions made about them.

Commissioner for First Nations Voice, Dale Agius, is an immensely qualified public servant and Kurna, Narungga, Ngadjuri and Ngarrindjeri person with connection to communities and countries across South Australia. His experience and ability to connect with Aboriginal nation groups, mainstream service providers and government agencies will be valuable for working collaboratively in bringing together a Voice model.

These consultations have already begun. Labor has committed to restarting the Treaty process in our state and establishing truth telling that recognises all aspects of our past, for without understanding our history, how can we go forward? A key part of truth is recognising and owning our past.

Statues and monuments that recognise great South Australian Aboriginal leaders and heroes are testament to that and will help current and future generations to understand the value and contribution of our Indigenous communities. Talks are underway with Aboriginal elders, being led by Dr Roger Thomas, the Commissioner for Aboriginal Engagement.

It is not lost on this government, either, the disproportionate rates of incarceration of our First Nations people. We need to understand why this is happening, and our government has committed to establishing an advisory commission for this very purpose.

Part of the self-determination pathways for our Indigenous population is a secure focus on Aboriginal-controlled education. We have committed to deliver Aboriginal-controlled education to Aboriginal people at Tauondi Aboriginal College and to secure future ownership. It will be operated and owned by our First Nations people.

To better care for our country, we are establishing a First Nations advisory group to speak directly to the Minister for the Environment and employ 15 extra Aboriginal rangers. We are ensuring that Aboriginal voices are heard on how we curate the land for future generations. And there will be serious financial penalties for breaches of Aboriginal heritage laws for destroying any semblance of the past which is deemed significant. We are looking to establish mechanisms to make sure a company or business does not benefit from the destruction of significant history in the name of change or progress.

Together with federal Labor we are providing more than $15 million to give Yadu Health in Ceduna a new home. We are undertaking to legislate to enshrine the Nunga Court as part of our justice system, ensuring that Aboriginal elders will have a voice in sentencing offenders and the healing of victims.

The Malinauskas Labor government is doing rather than just speaking about real change for our First Nations people. It is something worth noting in this house that, while we may have a road ahead of us, we have a destination in sight, and we will get there together. Today we are making a small step in the right direction. We know that from little things big things grow. I commend the house on enshrining the alterations to standing order 39.

The Hon. A. PICCOLO (Light) (12:47): I rise in support of this motion of the Premier to amend our standing orders to reflect the Acknowledgement of Country. Changes like this are by their very nature symbolic, but having said that I think sometimes symbolism is very important, because it does speak to our values. We have a lot of symbols in our society which by themselves mean nothing, but when they are put into context and talk about our culture, what we believe in and what we hold dear, it is very important. So this is a symbolic change but a very important change, because it does speak to those values, as I said.

It is important that we understand our values, because they inform our actions. It is very important that we have the right framework, the right values, to ensure that the actions we take in this area of policy are the appropriate ones. I would also add, though, the acknowledgement is very important, as I said, as a symbolic gesture, but it is not sufficient. We need to make sure we do a lot more to put into practice those things we hold dear to us. Certainly, this government is doing that.

This government has what I believe to be a bold agenda when it comes to Aboriginal Affairs. It has an agenda which will hopefully not only catch up on ground lost in the past four years but also move ahead and set the agenda for future governments in this area. I think one of the most important things that must be said is that this government is very clear about the way it will do business with Aboriginal people. It is important that we, as a society, work alongside Aboriginal people and enable them to realise their aspirations. Sadly, if we are honest with ourselves, we do have a very bleak history when we have dealt with Aboriginal affairs.

If you were to categorise some of the phases of our relationships between Aboriginal and non-Aboriginal people, it would be that initially we did it to them—we moved them off their land, we killed them, we did a whole range of things in the early days of colonisation of this country. Then we went through the early welfare era where we actually did it for them, and we made Aboriginal people very dependent on non-Aboriginal society. That was, in some ways, quite damaging because it did not enable Aboriginal culture to evolve over time as all cultures evolve over time. We stopped Aboriginal people from evolving their culture into the modern era.

Hopefully, this latest era of our relationship with Aboriginal people is about working alongside them. It is important that we work alongside them, that we take off our European (in most cases) lens and try to understand Aboriginal people's aspirations through their eyes. I will speak a bit more about that in a few moments. I think it is important to know that because sometimes I am still guilty of looking at issues which impact Aboriginal people through European eyes. We can only honestly address those issues when we see the issue through their eyes.

I have had the benefit of both Aboriginal men and women in my community pulling me aside and chatting with me about things, and they did it in a very positive way. They did it to educate me, which is really important, and I did learn a lot. Often, when we have a Welcome to Country, the Aboriginal person who actually welcomes to country explains some things to us.

That is very important because we need to understand what is behind those words. We need to understand what those words mean to Aboriginal people because there is a danger, if we just do the Acknowledgement of Country at every event and we do not understand the meaning, that it would not mean much and would be tokenistic. I think it is important, as non-Aboriginal people, to go beyond being tokenistic in our relationship with Aboriginal people and try to understand why these words are important. We also need to try to understand the issues that we confront, but through their eyes.

As I said, as a government we do have a very bold agenda for Aboriginal affairs, which is good. Underlining that broad agenda is our acknowledgement and recognition of the right to self-determination for Aboriginal people as quite a discrete cultural group. That is a right which is actually enjoyed by all cultures right across the world. In fact, the right to self-determination is one of the very first articles in the United Nations articles which actually formed the United Nations. It does not matter whether you are, like me, of Italian background or of Greek background or whatever your background or culture, you have a right to self-determination.

That does not mean that you live apart from other people; it means that you are acknowledged for the culture you were born in and that your culture is integrated with a broader culture. Certainly, we have other cultures right around the world, in addition to our own local Indigenous people, that do not actually enjoy self-determination. Hopefully, we can address that and, as a nation and as a state, we should lobby for those sorts of things to happen whenever we can.

Underpinning this self-determination, again, is listening to the voices of the Aboriginal people themselves and what is important to them. They have actually invited us to join them in a conversation about the relationship between Aboriginal people and non-Aboriginal people through the Uluru Statement. One of the most important things about the Uluru Statement is that it is an invitation. It makes it very clear that, as Aboriginal people, they are inviting us to walk alongside them, to have conversations with them and to understand who they are and their experience. That is what the Uluru Statement is about.

It is sad the way the Uluru Statement has been talked about in some political circles as something that would actually undermine our democracy or Australian sovereignty. There could be nothing further from the truth. The Uluru Statement talks about three important things: Voice, Treaty and Truth. It is ensuring that Aboriginal people in our society have a voice to parliament, where laws are passed and policy is made, which is important.

Treaty is about reaching an understanding of our respective roles in this society and community we call Australia. How do we learn to coexist in a peaceful way that actually benefits both Aboriginal people and non-Aboriginal people? We need to come to an understanding of how we also acknowledge the past through some sort of Treaty process. Treaty, in essence, if you want to put it in a spiritual sense, is about people coming to peace with each other. It is actually finding a way to coexist in a peaceful way.

The other thing that the Uluru Statement talks about is truth. It is true, I think, that no nation can advance itself unless it is truthful and honest about its past. We saw that in South Africa, where they had a truth commission. We have also seen it in other countries. We have also seen it in some countries where they do not want to acknowledge the truth and so they have internal conflict, time and time again.

One just has to look at the United States of America, where, when you look at it deeply, and it has been put to me recently, they have been at war ever since white Europeans settled there. They have been at war either with other nations or with themselves: the War of Independence, the civil war, the riots in the sixties and seventies for rights for black people in America. It is a nation that has actually been continuously at war with others or with itself. There is always some strife in America, and it continues today. In part, that is because I do not think that America as a nation has actually come to terms with its past or acknowledged its past. Hopefully, we do not make the same mistake as that nation.

One of the first steps we have undertaken as a government is to enshrine a First Nations voice into the South Australian parliament. This will allow Aboriginal people in our state to have direct input into the decisions made about them. Extensive consultations are being led by Commissioner for First Nations Voice, Dale Agius, and are currently underway within the South Australian Aboriginal community. This will be followed by restarting the Treaty process in our state and establishing a truth-telling process that recognises all aspects of our past.

This brings us to the next point, namely, that our symbols and statues and monuments talk about our non-Aboriginal past. It is time that we also acknowledge our Aboriginal past through statues, etc. They are important. The absence of statues and monuments of Aboriginal people reinforces the terra nullius concept—that they did not exist here and that the land was a blank canvas. Well, it was not: there were Aboriginal people living here for 60,000 years. With those few comments, I certainly support this motion and ask the chamber to support it.

Motion carried.

The Hon. Z.L. BETTISON (Ramsay—Minister for Tourism, Minister for Multicultural Affairs) (12:58): I move:

That the alteration to standing order 39 as adopted by this house be laid before the Governor by the Speaker for approval, pursuant to section 55 of the Constitution Act 1934.

Motion carried.

Ministerial Statement

FORMER BROMPTON GASWORKS SITE

The Hon. N.D. CHAMPION (Taylor—Minister for Trade and Investment, Minister for Housing and Urban Development, Minister for Planning) (14:15): I seek leave to make a ministerial statement.

Leave granted.

The Hon. N.D. CHAMPION: On 15 February 2022, Labor undertook to review the criteria used by the former Marshall Liberal government to select the MAB Corporation ahead of other short-listed proposals, which included a proposal from the Adelaide Football Club, as a preferred proponent for the former Brompton Gasworks site. On 4 May, the government released the criteria and weightings for the development of the former Brompton Gasworks site to allow public transparency into the decision-making process.

On 27 May, the Department for Trade and Investment appointed AECOM to conduct the independent review to examine the process, criteria and the decision made by the former Liberal government to award the preferred proponent status to MAB Corporation. Today, I inform the house that the independent review into the former Brompton Gasworks site decision has been received and considered by the government.

The review has determined that due to the criteria, weightings and the focus on commercial considerations in the request-for-proposal process set out by Renewal SA, the Adelaide Football Club proposal would not have been able to secure this site despite their clear and publicly stated interest in it.

The review also indicates that the provision of open space, entertainment and recreational opportunities provided in the Adelaide Football Club's proposal may have resulted in greater strategic and community benefit that may not have been captured in the criteria and weightings set out by Renewal SA at the commencement of the process.

The review has also identified and provided the government with considerable technical information that will undoubtedly inform future government projects. Due to probity and commercial sensitivities contained in the AECOM review, it has been recommended to government that the government wait until all commercial negotiations with MAB Corporation have concluded before releasing the AECOM review.

The Malinauskas Labor government has assisted the Adelaide Football Club in identifying and securing the best site to meet its long-term requirements for a world-class headquarters at Thebarton Oval. This is a good outcome for the Adelaide Football Club and a good outcome for the state.

It is clear that the former Liberal government Treasurer, the Hon. Rob Lucas, sought to bind the hands of any future administration by establishing MAB Corporation as the preferred proponent a mere three weeks prior to the caretaker period. He did so knowing that any decision to 'walk away from the exclusive negotiations exposed taxpayers to the possibility of significant legal action', as he stated in his media release on 16 February.

Following the consideration of the review and the decision of the Adelaide Football Club, Renewal SA will continue its negotiations with MAB Corporation to secure the best possible outcome for South Australians. No time has been lost by the undertaking of the AECOM review.

Members interjecting:

The SPEAKER: Order! The minister has the call.

The Hon. N.D. CHAMPION: The review has run in parallel to Renewal SA's continued negotiations, and its expected finalisation of the agreement remains as envisaged in January, when MAB was first announced as the preferred proponent.

Mr Whetstone interjecting:

The SPEAKER: Member for Chaffey!

The Hon. N.D. CHAMPION: As a result of ongoing good-faith negotiations between Renewal SA and MAB Corporation, several improvements have been made to the original proposal and MAB Corporation's commercial offering. To date they include:

- an increase in open space from the original proposed 25 per cent to over 30 per cent;
- maximising tree canopy to 25 per cent and committing to tree planting to create a long-term green and shady community;
- refinements to road cross-sections being identified which will reduce traffic impacts in the precinct, slow down vehicle speeds and give greater priority to bicycle and pedestrian movements; and
- increasing the affordable housing component from 15 per cent to over 17 per cent.

Renewal SA and MAB Corporation will now seek to conclude their negotiations, subject to the required approval from the Urban Renewal Authority Board.

I am pleased to report to the house that we have honoured and delivered our election commitment to the people of South Australia. In doing so, the government has ensured the best possible outcome for the former Brompton Gasworks site, while the Adelaide Crows have found their new home at Thebarton. Renewal SA will continue to negotiate with MAB Corporation as the government looks for the greatest return from the site and anticipates an improved commercial offering in the near future.

Mr Whetstone interjecting:

The SPEAKER: Member for Chaffey!

Members interjecting:

The SPEAKER: Order! The minister has the call.

The Hon. N.D. CHAMPION: I have concluded the ministerial statement.

Question Time

CONSTRUCTION, FORESTRY, MINING AND ENERGY UNION

The Hon. D.J. SPEIRS (Black—Leader of the Opposition) (14:22): My question is to the Premier. Has the $125,000 donation been given back to the CFMEU and, if so, on what date was it returned?

The Hon. P.B. MALINAUSKAS (Croydon—Premier) (14:22): Yes, I am advised, from the South Australian Labor Party, that that donation has been returned. As to the precise date that the transaction was concluded, I am happy to take that on notice.

CONSTRUCTION, FORESTRY, MINING AND ENERGY UNION

The Hon. D.J. SPEIRS (Black—Leader of the Opposition) (14:22): My question is again to the Premier. Why did the Premier direct the Labor Party to give the money to the CFMEU instead of to a domestic violence charity?

The Hon. P.B. MALINAUSKAS (Croydon—Premier) (14:23): Thank you to the Leader of the Opposition for his question. I made pretty clear, as this issue started to emerge, a number of things. The first thing is that if there was any evidence of the CFMEU not behaving consistent with the standards that we on this side of the chamber in the Labor Party believe to be true, then I will be instructing the party office to pay that money back.

The state executive considered that recommendation from myself, and I am very glad they acted accordingly, and the money has now been returned. That happened subsequent to evidence presenting itself that there were actions from CFMEU officials that we deemed and I certainly did not believe to be appropriate, and we gave them the choice—

Members interjecting:

The SPEAKER: Order! The member for Unley is warned. The Premier has the call.

The Hon. P.B. MALINAUSKAS: —and we acted. The issue of donations to political parties is one that I have a long held interest in. I have been an advocate for a sustained period of time that donation reform—in fact electoral funding reform—is something that is worthy of pursuit, and I think South Australia has an opportunity, if not an obligation, to lead. Our state has an extraordinary track record of advancing the democratic cause, being at the front end of reform that changes the way democracies and elections operate on the side of not just public transparency but also upholding the best traditions of integrity, which is why I went to the last election with a policy to ban political donations.

The SPEAKER: Point of order from the member for Morialta.

The Hon. J.A.W. GARDNER: Standing order 98: the Premier is now straying a long way from the specific question about why—

Members interjecting:

The SPEAKER: Order!

The Hon. J.A.W. GARDNER: —the Labor Party gave money to the CFMEU and not to a domestic violence charity.

The SPEAKER: I will listen carefully. I bring the Premier to the question.

The Hon. P.B. MALINAUSKAS: We went to the election with a very clear policy that we are committed to banning political donations, whether they be from unions or from businesses. I see that as being yet another demonstration of South Australia leading the way in terms of positive democratic reform.

I think that elections should be determined principally by the calibre of the candidates and the virtue of the policy that is presented to the electorate. It shouldn't be based on an arms race that necessitates an extraordinary amount of effort on behalf of politicians—which happens on both sides of the political divide—investing in a lot of effort and time in fundraising. I think that is effort and time that should be invested in developing policy, listening to community members and engaging with stakeholders; that is the best use of our time. This is a policy that we will pursue and I look forward to legislation being introduced into parliament, all being well during the course of the next calendar year to achieve that end.

CONSTRUCTION, FORESTRY, MINING AND ENERGY UNION

The Hon. D.J. SPEIRS (Black—Leader of the Opposition) (14:26): I have a supplementary question to the Premier. Can the Premier explain what actions by the CFMEU triggered his decision to ask for the money to be returned?

The Hon. P.B. MALINAUSKAS (Croydon—Premier) (14:26): Yes, it was reports of alleged vandalism to cars owned by the MBA.

The Hon. A. Koutsantonis: You know the MBA.

The SPEAKER: Order! The member for West Torrens is called to order. The leader has the call.

Members interjecting:

The SPEAKER: Order! The leader has the call.

CONSTRUCTION, FORESTRY, MINING AND ENERGY UNION

The Hon. D.J. SPEIRS (Black—Leader of the Opposition) (14:26): My supplementary question is to the Premier. On what date did the Premier find out about the vandalism of Master Builders Association property?

The Hon. S.C. Mullighan: It wasn't the same night as the dinner, was it?

The SPEAKER: The Treasurer is called to order.

The Hon. A. Koutsantonis: You weren't invited?

The SPEAKER: Member for West Torrens!

The Hon. A. Koutsantonis: You're still soaking.

The SPEAKER: Order!

The Hon. P.B. MALINAUSKAS (Croydon—Premier) (14:27): I don't have the specific date off the top of my mind, but I had a conversation with the CEO of Master Builders SA, Mr Will Frogley. I believe Mr Frogley to be a person of integrity who is thoughtful, and certainly the government and I enjoy a really productive working relationship with him. You should try it.

Members interjecting:

The SPEAKER: Order! The Premier has the call.

The Hon. P.B. MALINAUSKAS: I had a press conference on a Sunday afternoon and he conveyed to me verbally the events that transpired. I believe that was a press conference I was with the Treasurer at, a press conference where the MBA was endorsing Labor policy to address the housing affordability crisis in South Australia through a positive reform we are making with HomeStart. Upon receiving that advice from Mr Frogley, and that verbal communication, I pretty much started hitting the phones that afternoon—it was a Sunday afternoon—and not too long after that the action was taken by the state executive of the branch of the Labor Party.

The Hon. A. Koutsantonis: It's called leadership.

The SPEAKER: Order!

Members interjecting:

The SPEAKER: Order! The member for Florey is called to order.

CONSTRUCTION, FORESTRY, MINING AND ENERGY UNION

The Hon. D.J. SPEIRS (Black—Leader of the Opposition) (14:28): My supplementary is to the Premier. Were there any other forms of communication between the Premier and Mr Frogley prior to the day of the press conference in relation to the vandalism?

The Hon. P.B. MALINAUSKAS (Croydon—Premier) (14:29): I am happy to confirm to the house that—and, again, I appreciate this might be a different course of action to what those opposite might be familiar with—I speak to leaders of industry in South Australia on a frequent basis. I find them a useful source of information. I have regular contact with Mr Frogley and his team who, like I said, I believe to be good people who don't just offer up complaints about an issue at the time; they tend to offer solutions as well.

I have spoken to Mr Frogley on more than one occasion in regard to the MBA's concerns with the actions of the CFMEU in recent times, particularly since the activist intervention from the Victorian branch. That is something we spoke about in advance of that Sunday, not surprisingly, and it is something we will continue to speak about again into the future. However, our hope and our ambition—certainly as a government—is to make sure we facilitate productive and constructive industrial relations in South Australia, and that is what I will always advocate for.

BROMPTON GASWORKS SITE

Mr TELFER (Flinders) (14:30): My question is to the Minister for Planning. Will the minister release—

Members interjecting:

The SPEAKER: Order, member for Flinders!

Members interjecting:

The SPEAKER: Order, members to my right and my left! The member for Flinders is yet to pose his question.

Mr TELFER: Will the minister release the Brompton report in full?

An honourable member interjecting:

The SPEAKER: The shadow treasurer is called to order.

The Hon. N.D. CHAMPION (Taylor—Minister for Trade and Investment, Minister for Housing and Urban Development, Minister for Planning) (14:31): What I have said in the ministerial statement is there for everybody to peruse. Obviously there is a great deal of commercial-in-confidence information in the report—obviously because it is into the process—so I don't think there are any surprises in that. We will publicly reveal as much as we can while respecting the commercial sensitivities of the process.

BUILDING INDUSTRY

The Hon. A. PICCOLO (Light) (14:31): My question is to the Minister for Infrastructure and Transport. How is the Malinauskas government supporting the building industry and building industry associations?

Members interjecting:

The SPEAKER: Order!

The Hon. A. KOUTSANTONIS (West Torrens—Minister for Infrastructure and Transport, Minister for Energy and Mining) (14:31): Well, the first thing we do is we don't have childish fits and tantrums and we attend their industry association dinners. I was pleased to join—

Mr Pederick interjecting:

The SPEAKER: The member for Hammond is warned.

The Hon. A. KOUTSANTONIS: —I think it was seven ministers to go along to an industry that employs nearly 70,000 people in South Australia—not necessarily the Labor base, let's be fair. These are people who are in business; they are entrepreneurs, they risk their own capital, they're family businesses, they generally look to the Liberal Party. But I think it's fair to say there were a lot of concerned Liberals that night who just can't believe the tantrum of the Leader of the Opposition. He just refused to turn up. Why? He demanded something of the MBA that, quite frankly—

The Hon. D.J. Speirs interjecting:

The SPEAKER: The leader is called to order.

Members interjecting:

The SPEAKER: Order!

The Hon. A. KOUTSANTONIS: It's a big one!

Members interjecting:

The SPEAKER: Order! Leader, if you propose to make an allegation that a member is misleading parliament, you know there is a proper way to do it. You are called to order and you are warned. The minister has the call.

The Hon. A. KOUTSANTONIS: Sir, I think I snapped my line; I was only planning on a 50-kilo fish, but—

The Hon. D.J. Speirs interjecting:

The Hon. A. KOUTSANTONIS: I'm an embarrassment?

The SPEAKER: Order! The minister will not respond to interjections, and the leader will come to order.

The Hon. A. KOUTSANTONIS: I know the leader has a predilection for Disney characters; he seems to be obsessed by Disney characters.

Members interjecting:

The Hon. A. KOUTSANTONIS: Too soon?

The SPEAKER: Order! There is certainly a fresh vigour to members' contributions after the winter break. I will hear the member for Morialta on a point of order under 136.

The Hon. J.A.W. GARDNER: Point of order, sir: you called the minister to order and he is defying your ruling. He is obstructing the house.

The SPEAKER: In fact I called the house to order, member for Morialta. He certainly is, for the moment—

Members interjecting:

The SPEAKER: The minister has the call.

The Hon. A. KOUTSANTONIS: It's true to say that after the 2018 election the Labor Party took time to reflect on its loss. We went out and re-engaged with many of those associations that represent large portions of South Australian industry. We wanted to understand exactly where it was that we had let them down. This started in the very beginning with the election of our new leader, the then leader of the opposition, the now current Premier. We embarked on a round of consultation. We went out and spoke to people: 'In 16 years, you don't get everything right—you make mistakes. What were those mistakes? How can we improve on them?'

It became a regular conversation, and they were tough conversations. They were conversations where we actually had to listen, where we actually had to develop new relationships, accept our errors, accept that we had made mistakes, accept that we weren't perfect. That is difficult and we did that. Of course, in the process of that journey there comes clarity, and with clarity comes discovery and with discovery comes policy. This is not in any Disney movie you could reference.

Members interjecting:

The SPEAKER: Order, member for Chaffey!

The Hon. A. KOUTSANTONIS: What we went away and did was work on how we could incentivise people who risk their own private capital to grow and flourish in South Australia. What is it that we can do to make their lives a little bit better? Well, we are investing $175 million into five new technical colleges and $8.8 million over four years to fund TAFE courses where industry has reported shortages, like bricklaying—things that are important. If you turned up to these events, Mr Speaker—not you, sir, personally, but others turned up—they would hear from the coalface what it is that they need. We are investing $1 million over four years to the Master Builders Association to run a Born to Build program.

We listened. We didn't complain, didn't have tantrums, didn't demand to speak, didn't demand to be held up in a spotlight, didn't demand to have any special treatment: we went about the business of rebuilding. Perhaps it's a lesson spoilt children can learn.

MAB CORPORATION

Mr TELFER (Flinders) (14:36): My question is to the Minister for Planning. Minister, when will the agreement with MAB Corporation be executed and when will construction commence?

The Hon. N.D. CHAMPION (Taylor—Minister for Trade and Investment, Minister for Housing and Urban Development, Minister for Planning) (14:37): That's a matter for Renewal and MAB to conclude their negotiations and for it to go to the board, so I am not going to put a time line around that because it's up to them. I find the opposition's interest in this fascinating. You have gone from a situation where you announced this three weeks before the caretaker provision, with no consultation with the then opposition, you refused to release any of the criteria or weightings, you don't have any transparency over it. Even your own—

Members interjecting:

The Hon. N.D. CHAMPION: I am answering the question and you don't want to hear it.

The Hon. J.A.W. GARDNER: Point of order, sir.

The SPEAKER: Minister, please be seated, there is a point of order—

Members interjecting:

The SPEAKER: The member for Florey is warned. The member for Morialta wishes to raise a point of order under 134. I will hear the point of order from the member for Morialta.

The Hon. J.A.W. GARDNER: It was actually a very straightforward question seeking some facts, and the member is explicitly prohibited from debating the broader issue by standing order 98. He is new here. He is very arrogant in his approach, and it would help the parliament for you to give him some instruction, sir.

The SPEAKER: Member for Morialta, I observe that it is not necessary to reflect on other members in the course of raising a point of order except to draw the Chair's attention to a point of order. There is some merit in what the member for Morialta says. The answer may be on the cusp of becoming argumentative. I would draw the minister's attention to the question.

The Hon. N.D. CHAMPION: Well, Speaker, I don't deliberately set out to be argumentative but the whole nature of the opposition's questions asks me to anticipate what MAB Corporation and Renewal SA will do in the conduct of their negotiations. I have informed the house in my ministerial statement that they remain entirely on track and as envisaged when MAB were announced as the preferred proponent. I think it's perfectly reasonable for me to reflect on their conduct. It's not just me; interestingly enough, a report by long-time Liberals Christopher Moriarty and John Rowley—this is what they said in their report—

Members interjecting:

The Hon. N.D. CHAMPION: You don't want to hear it?

The SPEAKER: Order! The Treasurer is called to order.

Members interjecting:

The SPEAKER: The leader is called to order.

The Hon. J.A.W. GARDNER: Point of order, Mr Speaker.

The SPEAKER: Member for Morialta, I anticipate that the member wishes to raise standing order 98.

The Hon. J.A.W. GARDNER: Sir, you are wise.

The SPEAKER: Minister, I draw your attention to the question. The minister is—

The Hon. N.D. CHAMPION: I refer the opposition to my ministerial statement and to my answer.

The SPEAKER: Very well.

MAB CORPORATION

Mr TELFER (Flinders) (14:39): My question is to the Minister for Planning. Exactly when did the minister receive the report commissioned by his department into the Brompton decision?

The Hon. N.D. CHAMPION (Taylor—Minister for Trade and Investment, Minister for Housing and Urban Development, Minister for Planning) (14:40): My office received the report on the 22nd of the 8th.

MURRAY-DARLING BASIN

Ms HUTCHESSON (Waite) (14:40): My question is to the Minister for Climate, Environment and Water. Can the minister update the house on the Malinauskas Labor government's efforts to restore the health of the River Murray?

The Hon. S.E. CLOSE (Port Adelaide—Deputy Premier, Minister for Industry, Innovation and Science, Minister for Defence and Space Industries, Minister for Climate, Environment and Water) (14:40): The chamber would be well aware of the challenges that we are collectively facing in the health of the Murray-Darling Basin. It's not just at the South Australian end, but it's felt particularly acutely here because, first of all, we don't have any water to withhold from sending over the border to any other state and, secondly, we have the—

The Hon. S.E. CLOSE: —mouth of the—

Mr Whetstone interjecting:

The SPEAKER: The member for Chaffey is called to order. The minister has the call.

The Hon. S.E. CLOSE: —river which is constantly having to be dredged because it's unable to be sustained naturally to be open. Now, the challenges that we face—

Mr Pederick interjecting:

The SPEAKER: The member for Hammond is on one warning.

The Hon. S.E. CLOSE: —in the fulfillment of the Murray-Darling Basin Plan, which in itself was a compromise and an acceptance of what was able to be taken into the protection of the environment for the environment. The challenges we have really sit around these two important figures: 450 gigalitres, which was intended to come for the use of the environment, which was the condition on which South Australia signed the plan; and then the 605 gigalitres, which relates to projects which are intended to have a benefit equivalent of 605 gigalitres.

Both of those are seriously at risk. The 450 is almost entirely at risk and, of the 605, at least 150 gigalitres are at risk. The reason for that is almost entirely political. The first problem is that until very recently we have had a federal government that has been hell bent on allowing the other states, particularly New South Wales and Victoria, to not participate fully in the delivery of the plan, and they have done that even to the point with Barnaby Joyce being appointed water minister putting in a cap on the amount of voluntary buybacks that are possible for the environment.

Members interjecting:

The SPEAKER: The member for Chaffey is warned.

The Hon. S.E. CLOSE: The second element of political risk, though, comes with a previous state government that was so weak that a royal commission found that it capitulated to Eastern States' interests. It's probably worth quoting again from the report:

The South Australian Government's agreement to changes to the socio-economic criteria for efficiency measures should not merely be described as ill-advised. It is nothing short of a capitulation to the interests of the current Commonwealth Government—

Members interjecting:

The SPEAKER: Order!

The Hon. S.E. CLOSE: So what has—

The Hon. D.J. Speirs interjecting:

The SPEAKER: The leader is warned.

The Hon. S.E. CLOSE: Say that outside. Say that outside.

Members interjecting:

The SPEAKER: Order!

The Hon. S.E. CLOSE: You don't like—

Members interjecting:

The SPEAKER: Order! Member for Elizabeth! Member for Florey!

Members interjecting:

The SPEAKER: Order! The minister has the call.

The Hon. A. Koutsantonis interjecting:

The SPEAKER: Order! The member for West Torrens is warned for a second time. The minister has the call.

The Hon. S.E. CLOSE: Thank you, Mr Speaker. So what does the Malinauskas Labor government, as has very fairly been asked—what have we done? First of all, the royal commission—

Mr Pederick interjecting:

The SPEAKER: The member for Hammond is on two warnings.

The Hon. S.E. CLOSE: —which was first established by the Weatherill government has an enormous number of recommendations that are of great use across the basin. In fact, just yesterday

I met with the chief executive and the chair of the MDBA, both of whom have read it in detail and are interested in making sure that we act on as many of those recommendations as feasible. We will therefore be doing an update of the response, having seen the brochure with more pictures than words done by the last government.

We have also recognised that we need greater advocacy and communication, and to that end we have appointed Richard Beasley SC, a very fine lawyer and advocate for the health of the river.

Mr Whetstone interjecting:

The SPEAKER: Order!

The Hon. S.E. CLOSE: Again, say that outside.

Members interjecting:

The SPEAKER: The member for Chaffey is warned for a second time. The leader is on one warning. The minister has the call.

The Hon. A. Koutsantonis interjecting:

The Hon. S.E. CLOSE: I am looking forward to seeing the response.

The SPEAKER: The member for West Torrens is warned.

The Hon. S.E. CLOSE: We are working with Tanya Plibersek as the incoming minister, who has expressed much more commitment than previous National and Liberal Party ministers, and, of course, withdrawing support for the overly complex criteria that was signed off on in a capitulation by the former Minister for the Environment, the current Leader of the Opposition.

Members interjecting:

The SPEAKER: Order, member for Chaffey!

Members interjecting:

The SPEAKER: Member for Mawson!

Members interjecting:

The SPEAKER: The member for Mawson will not respond to interjections.

Members interjecting:

The SPEAKER: Order! The member for Flinders will be seated. Member for Hartley!

Members interjecting:

The SPEAKER: Order! The member for Chaffey and the member for Florey will depart the chamber for the remainder of question time.

The honourable members for Chaffey and Florey having withdrawn from the chamber:

BROMPTON GASWORKS SITE

Mr TELFER (Flinders) (14:45): My question is to the Minister for Planning. Was the minister provided with a draft copy of the final report into the Brompton decision and, if so, when did he receive it?

The Hon. N.D. CHAMPION (Taylor—Minister for Trade and Investment, Minister for Housing and Urban Development, Minister for Planning) (14:45): I think there was a draft copy of the report provided to my office. I would have to check the date on which that was received.

BROMPTON GASWORKS SITE

Mr TELFER (Flinders) (14:45): My question is to the Minister for Planning. Did Renewal SA seek advice on bidder compensation that our state may be exposed to in the event that the project was cancelled?

The Hon. N.D. CHAMPION (Taylor—Minister for Trade and Investment, Minister for Housing and Urban Development, Minister for Planning) (14:46): You would expect me, if we have sought legal advice, to keep that confidential. I think that's wise to protect the interests of the state. As my ministerial statement reflected, there's absolutely no doubt that the former Treasurer of this state set out to bind not just the hands of any future Labor administration but the hands of a future Liberal one as well.

Three weeks before caretaker, a major decision being made, one that was very controversial in the public, one that was very, very controversial in the public's eye. A great deal of talking, including by those opposite supporters. As I said before, there's a leaked Liberal Party report, which goes into some detail about how perplexing they found the decision on the Brompton Gasworks site and the decision to snub the Crows in such a public fashion.

The Crows' bid was not some small bid; it was a major bid of sporting infrastructure for this state. It should have been given greater consideration, in my mind. But all of those opportunities were forgone when the previous government announced a preferred proponent. The former Treasurer alluded to the fact that there might be legal implications for the state.

Those opposite now seem to believe that going from providing no information about this process, that we should be utterly transparent and release everything despite the risks to the state. It's completely unbelievable that they have gone from saying, 'Well, any talk of anything jeopardises the investor and business relationship' to 'release it all in a reckless fashion.'

The Hon. J.A.W. Gardner interjecting:

The SPEAKER: The member for Morialta is called to order.

VISITOR ECONOMY

S.E. ANDREWS (Gibson) (14:47): My question is to the Minister for Tourism. How is the government delivering on our commitment to growing South Australia's visitor economy?

The Hon. Z.L. BETTISON (Ramsay—Minister for Tourism, Minister for Multicultural Affairs) (14:48): I thank the member for Gibson for her question. The former Marshall Liberal government changed our marketing focus away from campaigns—they promoted our fantastic regions such as the Barossa and Kangaroo Island. What we got instead was a costly, embarrassing failure of a campaign based around an elderly man wandering Adelaide in tears.

Now, this sounds like a campaign run by the Liberal Party, not a campaign that should be promoting our great state to interstate and overseas visitors. I would like to quote for a submission to the Liberal Party state election review, 'The Marshall government decided to embark—

The SPEAKER: Order!

The Hon. J.A.W. GARDNER: Point of order, sir.

The SPEAKER: Order! Minister, there's a point of order. I will hear the point of order from the member for Morialta under 134.

The Hon. J.A.W. GARDNER: The substance of the minister's response is actually entirely debate, and her commentary about matters in the public domain that she is currently talking about are utterly irrelevant to her performance in her portfolio and the question that was asked.

Members interjecting:

The SPEAKER: Order! I will listen carefully. The minister has the question.

The Hon. Z.L. BETTISON: I'm happy to table the leaked report, if necessary. The Marshall government decided to embark on new advertising for the state. This involved employing an interstate firm. The ads involved a 30-second film clip of an elderly gentleman crying for about 15 seconds of the ad. Apparently, this is supposed to convey his sadness at not visiting South Australia sooner. These ads were not liked by a significant number of people and were mocked interstate. Despite the opposition to the ads, the government insisted they were excellent. This highlighted the Marshall Liberal government's disengagement with public opinion once again.

On coming to government, the Malinauskas Labor government suspended the South Australian Tourism Commission's creative service procurement, and we are now commencing a new procurement process that delivers on our commitment to attract tourists back to South Australia and grow our visitor economy. We have committed an unprecedented $45 million towards marketing South Australia over the next four years. This boost will include investment in new campaigns for South Australia that are distinct, creative and long-term focused and, unlike the previous government, we won't be funding campaigns that are objectively bad and damage our state's reputation.

I would like to touch on the fact that we are already seeing some fantastic results and I particularly want to point to the regional occupancy stats for July. As many of us know, we often have quite a peaky season in tourism. We have Mad March and a beautiful summer, and what we are looking to do is balance that out throughout the year. I am very pleased to announce that in July 2022, we saw an average occupancy for regional accommodation of 57 per cent. This is outstanding. Pre COVID, it was an average of 50 per cent.

What we are seeing is that throughout South Australia people are lingering longer and enjoying our beautiful regions. What we saw on Eyre and Yorke peninsulas was an average occupancy of about 65 per cent in July of this year, up from 55 per cent. On the Limestone Coast, there was an average occupancy of 57 per cent, up from a pre-COVID level of 42. In our wine regions of the Adelaide Hills, the Barossa and Clare Valley, we saw an average occupancy of 60 per cent in July.

There is still some way to go and there is no doubt at all that the tourism and hospitality industry has been impacted incredibly by COVID. While we have seen people return to travel, particularly within our South Australian regions, we know that we are still behind where we were prior to COVID, but I'm very pleased to say that at $6.1 billion we are getting there, closer and closer. I look forward to the time when we come here and I can announce that we are back there.

To those who are investing and supporting and continuing, we want to help them with an increase back to domestic flights, about 100 per cent, and about 61 per cent for international flights. We are getting there. It's going really well, but I will tell you what—a great tourism ad will make all the difference.

The SPEAKER: Before I call the member for Flinders, I draw the member for Morialta's attention to standing order 96, which does allow questions in relation to public affairs to be put to ministers. Public affairs is a concept, to my mind, broader than ministerial responsibility directly relevant to that portfolio.

MAB CORPORATION

Mr TELFER (Flinders) (14:52): My question is to the Minister for Planning. Did the minister or his office make or recommend any changes to the draft which was received by his office as identified in his earlier answer?

The Hon. N.D. CHAMPION (Taylor—Minister for Trade and Investment, Minister for Housing and Urban Development, Minister for Planning) (14:53): We sought more information about some technical matters regarding that report, as you would expect.

MAB CORPORATION

Mr TELFER (Flinders) (14:53): My question is to the Minister for Planning. Did the minister delay the finalisation of the report until after the Crows had announced that they would develop their new headquarters at Thebarton?

The Hon. N.D. CHAMPION (Taylor—Minister for Trade and Investment, Minister for Housing and Urban Development, Minister for Planning) (14:53): I fear the honourable member gives me greater powers than I actually have. Let's just clearly understand what has been achieved here. The election commitment has been fulfilled. The Crows have found a new home at Thebarton. I think that's good news, isn't it?

Members interjecting:

The SPEAKER: Order!

The Hon. N.D. CHAMPION: The report is—

Mrs Hurn interjecting:

The SPEAKER: Member for Schubert!

The Hon. N.D. CHAMPION: —largely a technical report and will inform future government decisions and we have an improvement in the actual terms MAB have provided, so they are all wins for the state. I am sure that all of you would understand that getting a better outcome was the government's aim here.

With regard to the member's question, he seems very intensely interested in the sort of minutiae of things rather than seeing the bigger picture, which is: election commitment fulfilled; Crows have found a home at Thebarton; a better outcome for the people of Brompton; and report received, which will inform future government decisions. This is a big win for the state.

Members interjecting:

The SPEAKER: Order!

SHOP TRADING HOURS

Ms SAVVAS (Newland) (14:55): My question is to the Treasurer. Can the Treasurer update the house about the government's position on shop trading hours and whether he is aware of any alternative positions?

The Hon. S.C. MULLIGHAN (Lee—Treasurer) (14:55): I thank the member for her question. We are all interested in the respective positions of the two major political parties in South Australia when it comes to shop trading hours. Of course, for several years now South Australians have been aware of the Labor Party's position in South Australia when it comes to shop trading hours, because in the lead-up to the last election we reaffirmed our long-held and publicly disclosed position on shop trading hours, and that is that we were up for reform.

In fact, early on in the term of the previous Liberal government the then opposition leader and now Premier made it clear to the then government that we were up for reform and put straight on the table some meaningful changes that would address the community's needs, and we have maintained that position ever since.

The question, though, that we are now confronted with, is: what is the position of those opposite, because nobody seems to know, not just amongst the people of South Australia but, it seems, within the South Australian Liberal Party. Nobody seems to know what the position is of those opposite, because we took a position—

The Hon. J.A.W. GARDNER: Point of order, sir: standing order 98 requires that the member be responsive to the question. Yes, it is also a convention of this place that government ministers are not responsible for opposition policy positions, something that has been argued by the member for West Torrens—

Members interjecting:

The SPEAKER: Order!

The Hon. J.A.W. GARDNER: —on more occasions than I can even remember during the last term of parliament.

Members interjecting:

The SPEAKER: Order! It is a sophisticated point of order which the member for Morialta raises and which engages a number of standing orders. I will listen carefully. I will remind the Treasurer that it has not been a practice to reflect widely on opposition policy, but, of course, the minister can address public affairs.

I have well in mind the words of the question, which invited the Treasurer to reflect on any other alternative policy positions in the state.

The Hon. S.C. MULLIGHAN: Thank you, Mr Speaker. I am grateful for your counsel because what I am attempting to do is to inform the house whether I am aware of any alternative positions, and the difficulty for me is that I can't be sure, because we don't have any information or evidence from those opposite.

What we did is that we went out and consulted with the business community, we went out and consulted with the community and we went out and consulted with workers, and we came up with a policy position which not only were we proud to take to the election but one which was endorsed by the representatives of the business community, Business SA.

However, that was not the approach of all groups within parliament, because those opposite in the last term of the Liberal government took a position of total and complete deregulation, because the member for Morialta and his colleagues happened—at that time at least—to believe that if you wake up at 2am on Boxing Day and you want to go to Coles and Woolies and buy a hot cross bun, the parliament—

Members interjecting:

The SPEAKER: Order!

The Hon. S.C. MULLIGHAN: —should provide for that occurrence.

Members interjecting:

The SPEAKER: Order! I will hear the member for Morialta on a point of order under 134—

Mr Tarzia interjecting:

The SPEAKER: Order, member for Hartley!

The Hon. N.F. Cook interjecting:

The SPEAKER: The member for Hurtle Vale, there is a point of order which we are endeavouring to take in.

The Hon. J.A.W. GARDNER: Sir, notwithstanding your previous ruling, which said that the question itself was paramount, and reflecting potentially that you will consider other standing orders and conventions, the question itself did not go to what happened under previous parliaments. The minister is debating the topic in contravention of standing order 98.

Members interjecting:

The SPEAKER: Order! I must say that the member for Morialta has struck on a rich vein, and it is a matter that ought require further consideration than a moment perhaps allows, except to say this: I am listening very carefully. I do understand, of course, that there were policies not only adopted by former oppositions but by former governments of the state. I will listen carefully.

The Hon. S.C. MULLIGHAN: Thank you, Mr Speaker. At that time, the alternative view represented a policy that the Marshall government doggedly refused to walk away from, despite being knocked back by the parliament and opposed by trade unions and Business SA. It was opposed by a significant number of small family businesses that would have been adversely affected.

Unfortunately, the Marshall government refused to yield and the minister would grant trading exemptions on public holidays, resulting in continual bad publicity. They're not my words: they are the words of Christopher Moriarty and John Rowley. As history demonstrates, they are wise words.

Members interjecting:

The SPEAKER: Order!

The Hon. S.C. MULLIGHAN: You might ask the question: with such wise words, how on earth did the member for Unley defeat Christopher Moriarty in preselection?

An honourable member interjecting:

The SPEAKER: Order!

The Hon. S.C. MULLIGHAN: Who is actually making the more substantial contribution to the Liberal Party of South Australia? We can all ruminate on that.

The Hon. J.A.W. Gardner: That's actually completely untrue.

The SPEAKER: Order! The member for Morialta is called to order.

The Hon. S.C. MULLIGHAN: It's completely untrue, is it? Oh, really?

The Hon. J.A.W. Gardner: Christopher Moriarty did not run against David Pisoni for preselection.

The Hon. S.C. MULLIGHAN: Oh, didn't he? Well, the media of South Australia must have got it completely wrong.

The SPEAKER: The Treasurer will refrain from responding to interjections.

Members interjecting:

The SPEAKER: Order!

The Hon. S.C. MULLIGHAN: Well, then they must have got it completely wrong, completely wrong. Of course, I wasn't referring to preselection battles down in Finniss, for example, that the member for Morialta might feel more closely about.

Members interjecting:

The Hon. D.G. PISONI: Point of order.

The SPEAKER: Order! Treasurer, be seated. I will hear the member for Unley on a point of order under 134.

The Hon. D.G. PISONI: In the member now speaking about Liberal Party preselections, on which he's incorrect, he is drifting right away from the substance of the question and I fail to see how it's relevant to the question that was asked.

The SPEAKER: I will accept the point of order under standing order 98. There is some force to the point of order. I bring the Treasurer to the question. The Treasurer, in the time remaining.

The Hon. S.C. MULLIGHAN: In summary, we have done the work that those opposite did not do—and continue, it seems, to refuse to do—and that is engage with the community, engage with the business community and engage with the workers who were impacted by the regulation of shop trading hours in South Australia. We're open for change. We made it clear before the election. We stand by those commitments and we look forward to legislating accordingly, if the parliament agrees.

BROMPTON GASWORKS SITE

Mr TELFER (Flinders) (15:02): My question is to the Minister for Planning. Can the minister inform the house what changes he or his office recommended to the draft copy of the report into Brompton before the report was finalised?

The Hon. N.D. CHAMPION (Taylor—Minister for Trade and Investment, Minister for Housing and Urban Development, Minister for Planning) (15:02): As I informed you in my last answer, I only ever asked for more information. I only had one meeting with the author of the report at the beginning of the process, where I stressed to him his independence. He has provided us with a technical report, which we have considered in great detail. It's a useful report to inform future government decisions.

Those opposite would understand that the complexities of the Brompton site were mainly about remediation, about the original master plan for the Bowden urban village, what was originally envisaged for that site. It's a site that's very long lived. It has spanned over multiple governments.

Mr Telfer interjecting:

The Hon. N.D. CHAMPION: The honourable member keeps interjecting.

Members interjecting:

The SPEAKER: Order! The minister has the call.

The Hon. N.D. CHAMPION: He might want to consider this: the government has fulfilled its election commitment, got a better outcome for the Crows, a better outcome for the people of Brompton and now we have made a ministerial statement for you to peruse. Renewal SA and MAB will continue their negotiations; both of those processes were separated.

This has been a completely normal process which all of you have become obsessed about and personalised in all your press releases, much to my surprise. I find your approach on this to be completely surprising, given that you have gone from a situation of signing up to this three weeks before caretaker with no consultation with the opposition. You would think that you—

Members interjecting:

The Hon. N.D. CHAMPION: Well, just before an election—

Members interjecting:

The SPEAKER: Order!

The Hon. N.D. CHAMPION: It was just before caretaker—a major decision that bound the hands of any future government. You actually think that you've got a strong hand to play here, and you don't.

Members interjecting:

The SPEAKER: Member for Schubert, order!

Members interjecting:

The SPEAKER: Order! The member for Schubert is called to order. There's a good deal of exchange across the chamber.

BROMPTON GASWORKS SITE

Mr TELFER (Flinders) (15:04): My question is to the Minister for Planning. Does the minister intend to consult the opposition before signing off on the Brompton development, which is what he wants—

Members interjecting:

The SPEAKER: Order!

Mr TELFER: Exactly right.

Members interjecting:

The SPEAKER: Order!

The Hon. N.D. CHAMPION (Taylor—Minister for Trade and Investment, Minister for Housing and Urban Development, Minister for Planning) (15:05): If I was about to embark—

Mr Telfer interjecting:

The SPEAKER: The member for Finniss is called to order! The minister has the call.

The Hon. N.D. CHAMPION: If we get to just before the caretaker period in an election year and it's a controversial deal, yes, I would come to you and ask your opinion on it. That's exactly what I would do. I certainly wouldn't sign off on it just out of the blue. It was a completely reckless decision, in my estimation, not just because it bound a future Labor government; it bound you as well, which is what I suspect the former Treasurer was trying to do.

COST OF LIVING CONCESSION

Mrs PEARCE (King) (15:05): My question is to the Minister for Human Services. How has the Malinauskas Labor government delivered its election commitment to double the Cost of Living Concession for this year?

The Hon. N.F. COOK (Hurtle Vale—Minister for Human Services) (15:05): I thank the member for the question, and I know the member for King has many people in her electorate who are currently benefiting from this fantastic policy decision that we made. The Malinauskas Labor government understands the cost-of-living challenges facing many South Australians. That's why we promised a range of measures at the 2022 election that help households who are doing it really tough.

Along with the Minister for Transport, we have now delivered on a commitment to provide free public transport for seniors 24/7. I commend the minister for this decision and for delivering this in July. We also have promised, as a team together, $177 million in extra funding for public housing. We have already signed the first contracts for new homes. I look forward to working along with many of my colleagues who have an interest in providing homes for people across South Australia in the coming years.

We promised to double the Cost of Living Concession for this financial year. I am aware that the now opposition did not promise anything in relation to providing cost-of-living relief in terms of raising the concession rate. Our concession promise, which we have now delivered, during the last week in August, when more than $70 million was paid into the bank accounts of eligible households, has been greatly received. This is the largest ever state government payment to concession recipients, with one in five South Australian households benefiting from this. More than 190,000 households received a doubled concession, with concession holders receiving up to $449 each.

This extra help can have huge positive impacts on low income households who do not have savings and face higher prices or unexpected bills. Cindy, who sells The Big Issue magazine and often works at the Adelaide Farmers Market, told one of the staff from my office that it meant she could pay a vet bill for her bird but also still buy her medication. This is a decision that so many households have to make: do they pay a vet bill or do they buy their medication? Cindy has been able to do both. She was one of almost 50,000 renters who didn't have to wait until next March to receive their concession because we have now overdelivered on the election promise, bringing the concession payment for renters forward by six months.

This was following a letter received by my office from a pensioner in the western suburbs, Lyndal, who asked why renters were forced to wait eight months until March for their payment when home owners received them in August. We listened and we have delivered. My office has received so many calls from members of the public, and I know the Premier also has received great feedback.

They were concerned that people might not hear about the extra payment and not register in time, so we promoted and we talked about this payment at every opportunity. As a result, 18,500 households have received cost-of-living concessions—sorry, Treasurer—for the first time. That is tens of thousands of people who have had more help today.

Applications for new recipients—so that may increase—is open until 31 December. Our system will provide more than $210 million to hundreds of thousands of households this year across a range of concessions. We have overdelivered on the promise and I am really proud.

COUNCIL MERGERS

Mr TELFER (Flinders) (15:10): My question is to the Minister for Local Government. Does the minister support council mergers and, if so, which councils in Stuart does the minister think should be merged?

The Hon. G.G. BROCK (Stuart—Minister for Local Government, Minister for Regional Roads, Minister for Veterans Affairs) (15:10): Two things: I have made it quite clear in this house and previously that I do not support forced amalgamations, and on my agenda no forced amalgamations are going to be discussed in this chamber, especially in the electorate of Stuart.

ADELAIDE AQUATIC CENTRE

Mr TARZIA (Hartley) (15:10): My question is to the Premier. Will the government's new swimming centre be owned and operated by Adelaide City Council or the state government?

The Hon. P.B. MALINAUSKAS (Croydon—Premier) (15:10): I thank the honourable member for his question. We went to the election with a clear policy to upgrade the Adelaide Aquatic Centre. The existing Aquatic Centre is a very old facility. It's outdated, it has substantial structural issues, it's expensive to run. The engineering associated with the existing Aquatic Centre—heating infrastructure and the filtration facilities—is old, and it is clear, I think, to all and sundry that the upgrade is long overdue.

The Adelaide city aquatic centre at the moment represents a substantial burden on Adelaide city ratepayers. I am pretty sure I am right in saying this that over 80 per cent of its usage, or well over 80 per cent of its usage, comes from outside the Adelaide City Council area. Because of its old nature and the high operating costs, that burden flows straight through to Adelaide city ratepayers.

This is an issue that came to our attention through a number of means, one is through the Adelaide City Council itself; to their credit, they have been advocating for change in this area for a while. But really the strong sense of community support for change in this area came from the powerful advocacy of the member for Adelaide.

The member for Adelaide, for anyone who knows her, is an incredibly tenacious individual and fearless in her advocacy for her local community. Going back pretty much not too soon after her preselection as the Labor candidate for the seat of Adelaide, it became clear to her that this was a project that was worthy of change. We needed a new policy and we got to work. We were very proud that during the course of the election campaign that, along with the now member for Adelaide, we were able to launch our policy.

That policy, to put a bit more detail on it, is for us to build a brand-new aquatic centre and we will operate the facility. So the state government will own the facility and we will operate that facility. We have an open mind to how that operation might look. The Marion Aquatic Centre is done in partnership with another organisation—I believe it is the YMCA—so that is something that we are open-minded to, but it will be a state government-owned facility. It will be a state government-operated facility.

I know that recently on the back of our press conference yesterday announcing the precise location of the Aquatic Centre—a location that was developed again consistent with community consultation, which is consistent with our election policy, which is utterly consistent with the wishes advocated for by the member for Adelaide—when we announced that policy we made it clear that we were looking forward to ongoing productive engagement from the Adelaide City Council.

The Adelaide City Council, as we understand it as the government, is committed to financially supporting the project. I would particularly like to acknowledge Councillor Hyde, a former Liberal Party candidate for the seat of Waite, and Councillor Abrahamzadeh for sharing that enthusiasm for a new project. I note the fact that it was none other than Councillor Hyde, seconded by Councillor Abrahamzadeh, saying in a motion passed by the council last year that if this funding support can be achieved then the overall project cost to council could be in the order of $15 million to $20 million.

I was somewhat alarmed that Councillor Abrahamzadeh managed to erase his support for the very motion of Adelaide City Council support. Nevertheless, we enjoy productive relationships with the Adelaide City Council and hope that continues beyond the current caretaker period.

CHILD PROTECTION

Mr TEAGUE (Heysen) (15:14): My question is to the Minister for Child Protection. Can the minister explain to the house, or provide any information at all, with regard to any step-by-step processes she has put in place with her department since becoming minister to ensure that children in need receive urgent attention? With your leave, sir, and that of the house, I will explain.

Leave granted.

Mr TEAGUE: I have asked the minister for such information on many occasions and over an extended period, including by my letter to the minister dated 23 May 2022 asking for such information in the context of an urgent case, my question to the minister on 2 June 2022, my letter to the minister dated 28 June 2022, and my numerous requests for such information in July 2022 following the tragic death of six-year-old Charlie. To date I have not received any substantive response.

The Hon. K.A. HILDYARD (Reynell—Minister for Child Protection, Minister for Women and the Prevention of Domestic and Family Violence, Minister for Recreation, Sport and Racing) (15:15): I thank the member for his question. I can say, first of all, that I have provided some answer to that question during a briefing I offered to the shadow minister on matters relating to child protection. I provided him with information about that particular question when I met with him and, as I said, during that briefing, I am happy to meet with him at any point and provide further briefings about these matters.

What I can say in this place is similar to what I have said before: that on becoming minister I discovered there was an alarming lack of questioning from the previous minister about particular events and particular circumstances and, similarly, generally a lack of voracious inquiry about the most important matters. What I set about doing immediately on becoming minister was review the procedures relating to notifiable incidents—how I am notified, when I am notified—and I absolutely reworked that process. I can assure the shadow minister, the member for Heysen, that I am relentless in asking questions about the safety of children and young people, and I will continue to be relentless in those inquiries.

First, in terms of action that has been taken, I have amended that procedure. I have been very clear with the department about that procedure. Also, the government has gone about fulfilling a number of commitments we made before the election and has also progressed a number of other actions since the election. The member would be aware that in the most recent budget we committed $128.9 million of additional funding to child protection.

We have also—very, very importantly—provided funding for the Child and Young Person's Visitor. Members who were in the last parliament would be aware that there was much advocacy and questioning of the previous government and the previous minister about the refusal to provide any ongoing funding for the role of the Child and Young Person's Visitor.

To link that to the question the member asked, having a funded Child and Young Person's Visitor to oversee children in care, oversee how they are going and be an advocate for them is incredibly important in terms of our ongoing, continuous efforts to improve children's lives, to improve their safety. It was really disappointing that the previous government simply refused to provide that ongoing funding. As people would be aware, the previous guardian, as a result of the lack of funding, actually resigned from that role.

One of the really clear actions that we have taken on coming to government is to fund that role for the Child and Young Person's Visitor. We have taken a number of other actions also on coming to government and we will continue to do so. Again, I reiterate that I thoroughly examined the systems and processes and made sure that I made really positive amendments to the procedures relating to notifications and I will continue to ask questions about those processes.

The SPEAKER: Member for Heysen, I see the member for Elder, but if you are asking a supplementary I am going to turn to you.

CHILD PROTECTION

Mr TEAGUE (Heysen) (15:20): Supplementary, in light of the minister's answer: can the minister explain to the house what step-by-step actions she took on 15 July, 16 July and 17 July 2022 after the Department for Child Protection advised her of Charlie's death, and why, having received, and I quote the minister, 'various briefings over the weekend and again on Monday 18 July' was the public not notified earlier? With your leave, and that of the house, I will explain.

Leave granted.

Mr TEAGUE: On 18 July 2022, media reported Charlie's death. On 19 July, the minister told South Australians that she was told of Charlie's death on Friday 15 July and received, and I quote, 'various briefings over the weekend and again on Monday 18 July' but did not address the public until Tuesday 19 July. That is in circumstances where the minister posted on social media her attendances at events at the weekend at sporting clubs apparently connected with her sport, recreation and racing portfolio responsibilities, including on 16 and 17 July.

The Hon. A. Koutsantonis: Were you doing your job on the weekend?

The Hon. K.A. HILDYARD (Reynell—Minister for Child Protection, Minister for Women and the Prevention of Domestic and Family Violence, Minister for Recreation, Sport and Racing) (15:21): Yes, I do my job every day. I will get to the substance of the question, but can I just say it's so disappointing to hear those comments questioning particular other responsibilities that I have when we are talking about such a grave, awful situation that our community is contemplating. I think it's very disappointing that you would talk about portfolio responsibilities in that regard—incredibly disappointing and quite insensitive.

What I can say, as the shadow minister spoke about and as I have been very clear about, is that I was of course notified in accordance with the new notification procedures that I have put in place since becoming minister and I received several briefings over the course of the weekend. In answer to your question, one of the very first things that I did—and I have said this publicly previously as well—is I actually made sure that I checked on the safety of other children in that home, which was, of course, one of the most urgent things to do and I did that. I checked on the safety of other children.

In terms of the part of the question about notifying the public, the shadow minister is aware that there were police investigations underway and I took advice about that, and of course that is why the issues were made public on Tuesday.

Grievance Debate

AUSTRALIAN LABOR PARTY

The Hon. D.J. SPEIRS (Black—Leader of the Opposition) (15:23): We are nearly six months into the first term of the Malinauskas Labor government and we are now seeing some very worrying patterns of behaviour emerging. Failure to deliver on major projects, a lack of transparency, jobs for mates, arrogance—

Members interjecting:

The Hon. D.J. SPEIRS: —arrogance demonstrated so well by the member for West Torrens, and poor judgement also demonstrated so well by the member for West Torrens, plague this government day by day. Over the winter break, though, arguably the most concerning behaviour was uncovered: a six-figure donation to the South Australian Labor Party from the John Setka-led Victorian branch of the CFMEU in the days leading up to the March 2022 state election.

John Setka is incredibly well known across not just the union movement, not just parliament, but actually in the day-to-day community and in the courts system as a militant unionist with a history of thug behaviour, terrible behaviour on worksites, who clearly has an issue respecting and treating women well. He is a perpetrator of domestic violence, a known perpetrator, and someone who people from industry, people from political parties, people from the Labor Party across this nation, people like Anthony Albanese, Labor Prime Minister of Australia, have sought to distance themselves from.

But that is not the case when it comes to the South Australian Labor Party. They have welcomed John Setka into South Australia. They have rolled out the red carpet for him, paid for by that $125,000 donation. They have opened the door for the Victorian branch of the CFMEU to undertake a significant takeover of workplaces in South Australia. They have given CFMEU members the capacity to sit on government boards, paid boards. I go back to jobs for mates.

After the revelation of the $125,000 donation entered the public record. We repeatedly, as an opposition, called on Premier Malinauskas for weeks to reject that donation. Not only that, we asked him to reject that donation and hand it to a domestic violence charity to send a strong signal that the behaviour of John Setka was not welcome in South Australia, not welcome on South Australian worksites, not welcome in the Labor administration of South Australia.

But what did the Premier do? He rejected those calls as 'a bit too cute'. What sort of message does that send to the victims of domestic violence in this state? What sort of message does that send? It sends a message that the Premier of South Australia and the Labor Party have a casual attitude to domestic violence and taking action to deal with it, and that is what we saw from this action—a casual attitude from Peter Malinauskas. When he did eventually—

Mr BROWN: Point of order, Mr Speaker.

The SPEAKER: Order! Leader, please be seated. There is a point of order which I will hear from the member for Florey under 134, the returning member for Florey.

Mr BROWN: I ask the Leader of the Opposition to withdraw that remark about the Labor Party members having a casual attitude towards domestic violence. It might be his attitude but it is not mine.

Members interjecting:

The SPEAKER: Order! The member for Morialta in relation to the point of order raised by the member for Florey.

The Hon. J.A.W. GARDNER: The member for Florey knows well that a class of people being described in such a way, such as the Labor Party in this case, has never been held to be in breach of the standing orders.

The SPEAKER: I will listen carefully to the point of order. A class has been identified. Unless the member himself is raising a point of order on his own—

Mr BROWN: Sir, I am personally offended by the remarks made by the Leader of the Opposition and I ask him to withdraw.

Members interjecting:

The SPEAKER: Order! The house will come to order.

Members interjecting:

The SPEAKER: Order! Member for Unley! Member for Newland! The member for Hammond was previously on two warnings: I reinstate those two warnings. Member for Florey, individuals are not readily discernible from the class. I am going to listen carefully to the leader.

The Hon. D.J. SPEIRS: Thank you for your wise judgement, Mr Speaker. The very fact of this matter is that this is a government that displays immense arrogance. It dismisses the views of domestic violence victims in this case and it has created a situation where a militant union has rolled into this state, is taking over worksites and will push up the cost of construction through delays and productivity loss. This is what Labor is doing in this state, and this comes from a Premier who said that he would be overtly pro business. Well, we have not seen much of that since he took office in March 2022.

What we have seen is a Premier and a government which have been repeatedly anti-business. They have allowed the CFMEU to roll into town; they have caved into union pressure on the Return to Work bill; they have reviewed an independent decision regarding the future of the Brompton Gasworks site; they have been spreading information, misinformation, regarding paid parking, discouraging investment around shopping centre owners; and they have delayed major projects such as the north-south corridor. This is a government that has lost its way within its first few weeks in office. The evidence is there very clearly for all to see and it will be up to South Australians to make that judgement.

YOUTH PARLIAMENT

The Hon. N.F. COOK (Hurtle Vale—Minister for Human Services) (15:29): I note the presence in the gallery, as have you, of Her Excellency Youth Governor, Samoda Silva; staff of the YMCA involved in the provision of the Youth Parliament program; tireless volunteers who make up the Taskforce of Youth Parliament; and, most importantly, some of our incredible youth parliamentarians who participated in this year's program.

I would like to note the contribution of the outgoing Youth Governor, Her Excellency Shania Richards, the first female First Nations Youth Governor in the program's history. In July this year, this house was graced with the newest cohort of the Youth Parliamentarian Program, a passionate group of young people fundamentally committed to having their say on issues and to making their mark.

Youth Parliament has run since 1995 and has an alumni now running into the thousands. I have been made aware today, Mr Speaker, that you may be one of those alumni. One of my staff members, Michael Hicks, is actually a member of the first class of youth parliamentarians; indeed, I believe he said he became the Prime Minister nationally of the Youth Parliament, and Rhianna Newman is also another graduate staff member. I feel very graced to be in the presence of all of you.

As the Minister for Human Services, I was proud to officially close the program this year and receive the results of bills debated here and in the other place. While I cannot formally present the bills to this place, as we have no mechanism, I would like to place on record the passage of the following bills, a true reflection of the compassion and the priorities of the thoughtful young people who constructed and debated some big ideas. We saw the following bills:

- Accessibility of Sanitary Products Bill 2022;
- Correctional Management Reform Bill 2022;
- Family Funding and Support Scheme Bill 2022;
- Gender-Affirming Healthcare Accessibility Bill 2022;
- Indigenous Foster Care Reform Bill 2022;
- Infinity Education Support Bill 2022; and
- Lithium-Ion Battery Recycling Bill 2022

I see a bright future in our state with such extraordinary bills, and I would like to touch on one of them: the Infinity Education Support Bill 2022. This bill considers the need for better support for neurodiverse students, a priority that the Malinauskas Labor government in particular is passionate about. We have recently appointed the first Assistant Minister for Autism to lead this important work, the work of our statewide autism strategy, the Hon. Emily Bourke from the other place.

We are determined to make South Australia an autism-friendly state through this strategy that we will develop in consultation with those with lived experience. The strategy includes $17.15 million to appoint an autism lead teacher in every public primary school with clear outcomes and accountabilities, increasing the number of autism-qualified staff in preschools, working with service providers, including Autism SA, to offer early intervention services in children's centres and investing $50 million to fund 100 additional speech pathologists, occupational therapists, psychologists and counsellors for access in the public school system.

My office met with one of the teams to provide advice and support and to connect them with relevant stakeholders. I am so pleased about how connected our young people are to the formal political process. We can make change together. It is heartening that passionate young people have also determined that this is a priority.

From my own electorate of Hurtle Vale, I would like to particularly recognise that Lucy and Lachlan participated in the program. Lucy is a Reynella East College student and Lachlan an Australian Science and Mathematics School student. Congratulations to a couple of my local up-and-coming leaders. I know they are very well engaged.

I would like to thank Nadia Clancy, the member for Elder, and Olivia Savvas, the member for Newland, who co-hosted the youth parliamentarians today. Olivia also participated in speaking with young people around the election process and today we did a round table with this extraordinary group of young people to identify some of the priorities for the future. Thank you to all of you and congratulations.

The SPEAKER: I recall well my youth parliament experience. I sat in a seat adjacent to the member for Hartley. I said very little; I was overawed by the experience. Some people said at the time that I was too quiet.

MERCATO

Mr TARZIA (Hartley) (15:35): It is an absolute pleasure today to speak about the 50th anniversary of what is certainly a jewel in the crown of my electorate of Hartley, that being the wonderful institution that is Mercato. Recently, I attended what was an absolutely astonishing gathering for Mercato. Mercato is a much-loved family business in my electorate of Hartley that caters to patrons and customers right across the state who come from all across Adelaide to indulge in and appreciate authentic Italian culture and cuisine.

Last month, Mercato celebrated its 50th anniversary, and I had the pleasure of attending what was a very generously catered celebration at Plant 4 Bowden. We know that in 1972 the Caporaso family, Imma and Mario, brought Italian culture and quality to Adelaide on St Bernards Road with their children, John and Angela. Compared with what Mercato is now, that first venture was a humble but dedicated continental deli, sharing once piece of Italy at a time with the community. It was not limited to cuisine either, as there was culture as well. When Italy won that most famous cup in 1982, Mercato was the only place in Adelaide where you could get an Italian T-shirt marking the occasion before everyone else lined up to get one as well.

Twenty-six years later, John and his wife, Rose, joined Imma and Mario to take the family business to new heights. In 2005, the famous Imma and Mario's Mercato opened in Campbelltown, later shortened to what is well known and loved, Mercato. The family business continued to grow into what it is today—a shining example of a strong, family-owned business and, more importantly, the successful realisation of the great Australian dream.

Mercato is an example that, if you come to this country and you work hard and you make sacrifice and you make smart business decisions, you can do extremely well. There are people in my community who have worked for Mercato for years and years—in some cases over 20 years—so not only have the Caporaso family provided for themselves but they have also provided for the local community, giving jobs to dozens and dozens of people along the way.

The milestones never stopped. In 2015, we saw the launch of Bar Mercato and in 2018 we saw the birth of wholesale business Vinify Wine Co—another strong and thriving venture. It is certainly clear to me that this dedication and hard work runs in the family, and John has certainly inherited this quality. Mercato today boasts an astonishingly vast and diverse selection of the highest quality Italian cuisine and goods, and their reputation speaks for itself.

The milestones continue. When John was asked what further ambitions he had for Mercato's next 10 years, he responded with, 'More stores! A market! To go global!' It is fair to say that, in the case of Mercato, first it is Campbelltown, then it is North Adelaide and then it is the world because we learnt on that night that there will be another version of Mercato at 88 O'Connell Street. I guarantee you one thing, sir—all the residents who complained about 88 O'Connell Street will be shopping at Mercato. You can bet your bottom dollar on that, sir.

It is a new chapter for Mercato that will enable the family to share their hard work, their love and their flawless interpretation of Italian cuisine and culture. It is a wonderful opportunity for Mercato to be a part of this exciting project together with Commercial and General. As John says, 'Mercato has a view that the world needs to eat, drink and live better,' and there is no doubt that this fantastic opportunity will realise this vision.

I do want to thank the Caporaso family for allowing us in our local community to live a bit better, to eat a bit better and to drink a bit better. It is a wonderful success story of small business: a migrant family who came here, put it all on the line and prospered, but of course it has also employed dozens and dozens of people along the way for what is truly a vital jewel in the crown of Hartley. I wish Mercato and the family much success for the next 50 years.

YOUTH PARLIAMENT

Ms SAVVAS (Newland) (15:40): I would like to thank the member for Hartley for his comments on Mercato, which is, of course, one of my second homes in the north-eastern suburbs as well, and pay my respects to the Caporaso family—I went to school with many of their grandchildren.

I am here today to speak on the Youth Parliament program, and I would also like to note the presence in the house of youth parliamentarians, including members of the task force; staff of the YMCA; and the incoming Youth Governor, Samoda Silva. I would also like to acknowledge the outgoing wonderful, bubbly, bright Youth Governor, Shania Richards, who I do not believe is here with us today. Thank you for being here today and for your contribution to the debate about the future of our state.

As the youngest member of this house, the Youth Parliament program is particularly important to me because, as I am very often told and have been in the months since the state election, 'You can't be what you can't see.'

I was not a youth parliamentarian. I hate to admit it, I am sorry, but I was involved in many other forms of youth engagement: debating and public speaking at school; Young Labor; university politics; the National Union of Students, and the list goes on. I was also a parliamentary intern to the now Minister for Health, the Hon. Chris Picton, which makes me incredibly excited to consider the possible future paths for the wonderful participants.

The program incorporates so many inspiring young people, including residents from my community. I was lucky when I came in for the closing ceremony to spot Gabbi and Clarissa from my electorate of Newland and proud to sponsor a youth parliamentarian to participate this year as well. I would also like to take a moment to shout out to the incredible Eloise Atterton, who is not only the 2022 Training and Parliament Coordinator for Youth Parliament but was also the fundamental backbone of the 2021-22 Newland campaign. I have seen firsthand the fruits of this program, and our wonderful Eloise is one to watch.

The Youth Parliament program runs from March to August each year and includes mentoring, a training weekend, a week-long camp and access to Parliament House. I am passionate about this place being accessible to everyone, so having this program happen right here is incredibly important. Young leaders from all across South Australia come together to learn about public speaking, parliamentary etiquette, bill development and youth advocacy, and they put forward their ideas for the challenges facing South Australia across a series of bills debated right here in this chamber and the other place.

I was lucky to visit Youth Parliament on the day of their youth government elections earlier in the year and speak to the group about representation and the election of young people. It was an incredible privilege to join them and an incredibly exciting day for them all. I am still so warmed by the wonderful comments and questions I had from so many of the participants on that day.

They had an incredible display of public democracy and participation, with many people voting across the week to determine the government of Youth Parliament and electing Party B to the government of Youth Parliament. This broad community support is a wonderful reflection on the support that the program enjoys.

A number of bills were passed by the team, as mentioned by the minister, and I would like to mention one in particular that I thought was particularly interesting, the Lithium-Ion Battery Recycling Bill. More South Australians than ever rely on electronics, which includes a greater dependence on lithium-ion batteries, which are present in almost every rechargeable device and which pose a major fire hazard if not disposed of or stored correctly.

The Lithium-Ion Battery Recycling Bill aims to encourage the safe disposal and recycling of lithium-ion batteries by increasing public awareness and providing community centres with safe disposal boxes and funding the development of the first ever South Australian lithium-ion battery recycling facility. I will have to chat to the Treasurer about that one. This bill is well and truly a reflection on how young people view their own responsibilities to the broader community, thinking about not only their impact but also our whole society.

I think that is just one example of the great work the youth parliamentarians this year have done. I commend the 2022 Youth Parliament, the task force, the participants and everyone who has joined us here in the house today.

REGIONAL MENTAL HEALTH SERVICES

Mr WHETSTONE (Chaffey) (15:45): I rise to speak about an issue that is quite concerning, particularly in the regions, and a conversation that South Australians at large have—that is, the impact of mental health and the ongoing pressures it has on day-to-day life, particularly with the impacts through adversity—whether it is in day-to-day life, enduring the social aspects, the pressures in life or some of the social pressures on people.

In the regions, we see particular pressure on the primary sector due to isolation issues and commodity pressures—the downward pressure on commodity prices—that places ongoing pressure on family life and the family unit. Over recent times, particularly in my shadow portfolio involving mental health, suicide prevention and substance abuse, the sad reality is that we are seeing nine suicides on a day-to-day basis. Seven of those suicides are men. Recently, particularly in my home electorate of Chaffey, we have seen that the number of impacted families in the primary production sector is growing.

I want to pay tribute to Dr Kate Gunn, who initiated the Vocal Locals program. It is a great initiative that has been rolled out as a trial in the Riverland. We had 10 ambassadors to speak up, to ask people, and I guess it reflects what is coming up with R U OK? Day. The Vocal Locals program was the brainchild of Dr Kate Gunn through the University of South Australia. Its 10 ambassadors have been trained and given an understanding of the issues, and they have also been out and about in communities, spreading the word that it is okay to speak about some of those personal issues that you have, the mental pressure that you experience and suicidal tendencies.

Last week, in the Riverland we had a graduation for those 10 Vocal Local advocates to demonstrate the work they are doing in their local community and the conversations they are having. They have received a level of training from Tanya Lehmann, a local health professional who has done an outstanding job in giving those ambassadors an understanding and a level of concept of knowing when people are under pressure, knowing when any of their constituents, their friends, their community people are doing it tough.

The Vocal Local initiative has been spread far and wide. Social media was used as a conduit to give people an understanding that it is okay to speak up, that it is okay to speak to your friends and family, that it is okay to speak to those ambassadors as Vocal Locals to express your concerns, your health issues or your level of mental health anxiety. What we have seen through that program is that we have spread the message far and wide.

The program has been a runaway success, and I want to thank Kate Gunn and the 10 advocates, who have also been outstanding role models in this program. We celebrated the program at Salena Estate last week. It was a coming together of the success stories that were told around the dinner table. Some of those stories have been quite sobering, that people have been out there giving the opportunity for those who are suffering with mental health, with anxiety, and even with suicidal tendencies.

What it has shown me, what it has shown the advocates and what it has shown the trial program is that this trial should be repeated and it should be rolled out right around South Australia, not just in the regions. I think there is an opportunity; we should celebrate the opportunity to ask our friends and family, 'Is it okay?' I will have more to say about that later in this sitting week. It is a monumentally important issue that we all need to have more understanding and acceptance of.

YOUTH PARLIAMENT

Ms CLANCY (Elder) (15:50): I thank the member for Chaffey for his contribution, and I really look forward to going out to his electorate in the near future and meeting with him and those advocates.

I also rise to speak today on the Youth Parliament program and acknowledge the presence in the house of youth parliamentarians, members of the task force, staff of the YMCA and the incoming Youth Governor. Welcome back to your house. I also acknowledge Michael Hicks, better known as Hicksy in this place, who is no doubt watching from inside this building right now. He was part of the very first Youth Parliament in South Australia.

One of the first emails sent to me, as the new member for Elder, was from Drew Cuffley. Drew is a young person from my electorate who had taken part in the Youth Parliament once before and was really keen to do it again. Drew said it was an amazing experience finding other inspirational young people with similar interests and that he found it helped him to overcome social anxiety. He did not expect to speak more than once, but with the encouragement of peers and mentors at the program he managed to speak six times in the debate as well as once during the adjournment speeches.

Hearing what a difference this program made to him, I was pleased to be able to make a contribution towards the cost of the program so he could do it again. After the program, he emphasised again how much it helped with his anxiety. He described Youth Parliament as:

...one of the most meaningful experiences I have had. Being around so many inspirational, smart, friendly, young people was an absolute honour and privilege.

So, ups to you guys. I have no doubt Drew is not alone in feeling that way. The coming together of so many passionate young people wanting to share their views and contribute to our community is very special. I thank the YMCA for making this possible and supporting participants to grow and develop.

I was delighted to attend the opening ceremony of the Youth Parliament program and to witness the future leaders of our state in action and to then read some of the bills that were discussed. This included the Gender-Affirming Healthcare Accessibility Bill 2022, which I was so happy to see was passed by this Youth Parliament. This bill aims to reduce significant barriers experienced by members of the LGBTIQ+ community, increasing access to gender-affirming health care, in particular for regional communities. This year, our government will begin work on an important piece of legislation that will ban conversion practices which are extremely harmful and prevent LGBTIQ+ people from being able to live freely.

I am so proud both of the young people seeking action on these important issues and also to be part of a government that understands the significance and importance of accepting who you are, not just for young people but for all. I commend the thoughtfulness of these young people in bringing light to this important issue and confirm my ongoing support for the LGBTIQ+ community.

Another Youth Parliament bill I want to mention, which was from participant Erin, whom I have known since she was a little baby, is the Accessibility of Sanitary Products Bill 2022 (SA). Period poverty is a barrier for young people to reach their full potential. This bill is an important tool in increasing awareness about the issue in the South Australian community. Period stigma creates a sense of shame, embarrassment or hesitation to talk about periods and is often cited as a reason for students missing school. This is a significant issue preventing equality of access to education and affecting outcomes for young people.

These are conversations that some people find a little bit difficult to have. There are still many adults who get squeamish at the very mention of a period, let alone when I start spouting the virtues of menstrual cups, which many of you would have heard me do a few times. There really are a number of virtues, including comfort, affordability, and less of an environmental impact, so I am always happy to have a chat about them whenever anyone would like. There is no need to feel squeamish about it.

People might find the topic of periods awkward, but we have to talk about them; otherwise, how can we address period poverty? I acknowledge this is an issue Irene Pnevmatikos and Connie Bonaros in the other place have done significant work on, and I am so proud of the young people who worked on this bill in Youth Parliament. I understand that this bill passed with the overwhelming support of both houses, so congratulations to everyone who was involved this year and I look forward to seeing what happens next year.

Mr ODENWALDER: Mr Speaker, I draw your attention to the state of the house.

BillsSUPERANNUATION FUNDS MANAGEMENT CORPORATION OF SOUTH AUSTRALIA (INVESTMENT IN RUSSIAN ASSETS) AMENDMENT BILLSecond Reading

Adjourned debate on second reading.

The Hon. N.D. CHAMPION (Taylor—Minister for Trade and Investment, Minister for Housing and Urban Development, Minister for Planning) (15:57): The legislation that I want to discuss today relates to events in Europe and the Russian invasion of Ukraine. There is probably a lot we could say, but I think one of the things that it speaks about is President Putin's miscalculation, and this highlights the dangers of aggressive authoritarian states and particularly those which have one foot inside the international order—that is, they sit on the Security Council, they participate in the United Nations, they are at the G7, they participate in all those multilateral forums—and at the same time have a foot outside of the rules-based order and seek with that foot or that aspect of their statecraft to completely undermine the postwar consensus.

The danger of that is it is a danger to individuals, a danger to states and a danger to order in the world, and what we see is aggression, opportunistic behaviour, and risk-taking. We have seen this over and over again in the last few years. There have been many reports by ASPI, by Chatham House, by RAND Corporation and various other think tanks which outline the Russian states'—and other states'—behaviour in one respect, as I said, being part of the multilateral order, often putting the regime's ill-gotten assets in places like London, the US and other places, and indeed in Australia's Gold Coast. There is a particular flow of money to the Gold Coast. Basically, they like the Western world for the rule of law, for the security of their assets and all of that. They like being part of the multilateral order, but then they have a whole aspect of their statecraft that seeks to completely undermine that.

You get aggression in Africa, where you see the participation of the company Wagner, a mercenary outfit, and you see various FSB operatives or ex-FSB operatives, Russian spies, operating in places like the Central African Republic, often influencing elections, often appropriating assets—mines, goldmines, diamond mines—and manipulating a nation's statecraft. I saw this firsthand when I spent a bit of time at the United Nations during the period in which Foreign Minister Lavrov was chairing the UN Security Council. It was quite obvious that they sought to use that august institution as a method of advancing—in a very obvious way—their incursions into Africa.

What we found with Russia was that they were doing a number of things on a number of levels, but all of it dominated by this aggression, by pushing things to the limit, by being opportunistic. If there are elections to be manipulated, if there are issues in a democratic society to be manipulated, if there are assets to be obtained through quasi-colonial methods, they do that in places like Africa and elsewhere. All this undermines the international order in a quite significant way. This reached its high point with Georgia and Chechnya, both times when the world did not call out Mr Putin's behaviour. In fact, countries like Germany got even deeper into a relationship with him, an economic and diplomatic relationship.

What we have now seen in Ukraine is a high point of that risk-taking, that aggression, that opportunistic behaviour. Mr Putin and his government calculated that it would be a three-day war, that they would simply remove President Zelenskyy and the rest of the civilian leadership, that they would manipulate the apparatus of the Ukrainian state to their benefit, that they would see military collapse and international acquiescence to the complete destruction of the Orange Revolution and the moving of Ukraine—a vast area with millions of people and basically Europe's breadbasket—back into the sphere of influence of the Russian state. This was an attempt to re-create the Soviet Union.

If this had actually occurred, it is not as if the appetite for risk, for aggression, would have been sated in any way. We know what would have happened next: Lithuania, Estonia, the Baltic states would all have been under threat. We know that Poland would have been under threat, because if characters like Putin are indulged they just keep going.

What we found was that all the assumptions of Mr Putin's government, all his intelligence apparatus, were wrong, completely and utterly wrong. We have seen excellent intelligence work by the governments of the United States and the United Kingdom, which consistently called out Mr Putin's intention and positioning to invade the state of Ukraine. It was an absolutely brilliant use of the Free World's statecraft. They kept on calling it out and warning European nations, nations like Germany and the like, that this was going to occur.

That was critical. There was a sort of denial going on that Russia would do this. Because they have one step inside the multilateral order, no-one could quite believe that a member of the Security Council would do the very thing that the United Nations was set up to prevent—that is, the use of force to change borders, not just in Europe, but especially in Europe, but for the world. It was a good use of statecraft, of intelligence, by the United States of America and by the United Kingdom in particular.

We saw a very spirited and technically competent resistance by the Ukrainians. This was very important because they showed that the Russians could be beaten on the ground by targeting their supply lines. The Russians were briefed that they would be met with open arms, that the Ukrainian people would be throwing flowers beneath the tracks of their tanks, but what actually happened was a spirited and militarily effective attack against the Russian war machine, which targeted supply lines, which targeted its tactics, which demoralised its soldiers, which blunted its offensive, which prevented the removal of the civilian leadership and consequently the takeover of the country.

All of that has come at a huge military cost. All of it has come at a gigantic economic cost. We are now seeing that economic cost ripple throughout the world, including in the price of food in the Middle East because Ukraine is not just the breadbasket of Europe; it is the breadbasket of the Middle East as well. Those grain shipments are now starting to flow again through the Black Sea by agreement, but we did face a very real prospect of famine in the Middle East.

We have seen escalation in the cost of timber. Builders would have seen that here, partly generated by the amount of timber that used to go out of Russia via the Baltic states. Our international supply chains are now all interlinked. We here in Australia are suffering from timber shortages and steel shortages and the like. Part of that is Chinese ports not operating properly because of pandemic lockdowns, but part of it is also the demand for timber generated in Europe because of the sanctions on Russia.

We have seen huge economic costs, and of course gas and oil are the most critical ones. In Germany now, the Russians have just notified the Europeans that the Nord Stream 1 gas pipeline will be closed. It will not reopen. It was closed for maintenance and it is going to stay closed. Putin is on the last roll of the dice now to try to starve Europe of gas and push them to a breaking point by which they might stop funding and giving military assistance to Ukraine at the threat of massive economic dislocation to achieve a foreign policy end.

Of course, what that presents is, again, a breakdown of the post-World War II international order, a return to autarky in the case of Russia, which is a perilous course for any nation to take. There is no nation in the world that is self-sufficient in every single thing, and we are now seeing that play out in international supply lines. There are also the civilian costs, with waves of refugees and 7.1 million people having been displaced in Ukraine, and we are starting to see some of those people come here—children, women, families. It is gratifying for the Australian nation to welcome them, but of course it would have been better if we did not have to, if those people could stay in their homes and not have to flee before the Russian war machine.

What we ask now is: how do we do our bit? Do we send aid? I am certainly a great believer in the national government sending more military aid. I think we could certainly send more artillery pieces and probably more armour; I think those two things we could do a great deal more of. We should definitely think of ourselves as an arsenal for democracy, to borrow a phrase from Franklin Delano Roosevelt, and we should provide money to the Ukrainian states so they can withstand this very difficult period in their history.

They look to us, to the Free World, and Australia has never in our history not come to the aid of countries whose sovereignty has been impinged. Most recently, the Agent-General picked up some soil from Dernancourt in France and was a participant in delivering that to Australia. Dernancourt was where Australian soldiers fought and died to protect the liberty of France against another form of imperialism and aggression. We have always done that. I think we should continue to do that.

The Treasurer has brought a very sensible bill to this house which gives Funds SA a mechanism by which we can play our part by divesting of Russian assets, by divesting of those economic instruments which might send a message, just another one of the messages, to Russia that their behaviour is completely unacceptable and will not be tolerated. We just have to keep doing this, because there is no doubt that this is an absolute contest of will. People should not be under any misunderstanding: this is a contest of will.

Putin believes that the Free World is weak, that democracies are weak, that they will break, that we only care about our self-interest. It is the same calculation that was made by other fascist and authoritarian states. Where we see debate, where we see the sensible contest between political parties and civil society, they see weakness and inability to act.

Time and time again they have been proven wrong. They were proven wrong by the United Kingdom in World War II. They were proven wrong when Franklin Delano Roosevelt overcame the forces of isolationism in the US. They will be proven wrong today as well, but we have to hold the line and we have to do our bit. We have to redouble our efforts. We have to keep our interest. I know that the Premier feels this most sensitively because his grandparents fled Soviet imperialism, the occupation of Lithuania, and they came to the Free World.

We cannot have the Free World in retreat and authoritarian aggression in advance. We have to be prepared to do our bit—take refugees, stand in solidarity with the people of Ukraine—to get out of the economic world of Russia because that sends a message to the Russians. It is interesting looking at the Russian economy. It is a mirror image of the German economy. The German economy provides all the machine tools and provides a lot of advanced manufactured goods into Russia, and they get gas in exchange. That economic relationship is breaking down; it has broken down. The Germans have had to do a mea culpa and realise that that was not a wise thing to do and they have had to restructure their economy.

We are doing our bit, our little piece. We are dealing with supply-side inflation and, as I said, it is the first time we have seen that in my lifetime. I think I was born during the last bout of supply-side inflation; we know that was for other reasons. But we know that the impact of war in Europe does have an impact on prices flowing through here, on energy prices in particular. We have to be prepared to make that sacrifice so that the world can be free, so that Ukraine can have its own sovereignty, can decide its own foreign policy, be part of Europe and resist the aggression of the Russian state.

The whole purpose of Putin's invasion is one of defensive aggression. He knows that if there is a democratic state on the edge of Russia, that is European in its character and believes in the rule of law, the protection of individuals, the protection of citizens and is stable, then it is the worst example he can have on his doorstep for his own people, because sooner or later the Russians will wake up and realise they do not have to have a tsar. They do not have to have a regime where if you are not simpatico with it they will kill you, or you will meet some unfortunate accident in some way, or you will be assassinated in another country. He knows that the minute that example is right there on his doorstep, the Russian people might choose democracy themselves.

That is why this is a contest of wills and that is why this is so important. It is important for the freedom of Europe, it is important for the people of Ukraine and we are doing our small part, led by the Premier and the Treasurer, in a very sensible bit of legislation that I have no doubt will have the support of this house. Hopefully, we can light the beacon of liberty here in our own state and the people of Ukraine might find some solace and some solidarity in that.

Mr HUGHES (Giles) (16:15): I also rise to add a few words in support of the Superannuation Funds Management Corporation of South Australia (Investment in Russian Assets) Amendment Bill.

The member for Taylor has covered it well. This is incredibly important. This bill is a small element. No-one is pretending that in the overall sense it is a massive tangible form of support, but at a state level you do what you can and we should not see the superannuation money generated here invested in Russian assets. The national government needs to continue doing what it is doing when it comes to the provision of arms and support for Ukraine.

I am staggered that I am here today speaking about something like this. When the so-called exercises were going on on the border of Ukraine, I thought, 'They're not going to invade.' Just like a lot of people globally I thought, 'They are not going to do this. This is just madness.' But they did it and the justification is just absolute BS. It is talking about the denazification of Ukraine. What absolute rubbish.

If anything, Putin has taken a page out of the playbook of the Nazis. If there is something comparable in history it is with the Nazis. The same sorts of lines were used when the Nazis initially took over part of Czechoslovakia. That was about the Germans in that part of Czechoslovakia being oppressed by the people of Czechoslovakia. It was nonsense and it was just an excuse to start the invasion. Of course, the same type of line is being used by Putin, that the Russian people in Donbas and Crimea were being hard done by and 'we need to go in and protect them'. It is absolute nonsense.

I think the member for Taylor hit the nail on the head when he said that the last thing that Putin wants on his doorstep is a functioning, open, democratic society. That is why this is so incredibly important—and it is going to be incredibly difficult, as I am sure there is going to be a winter of discontent in Europe coming very soon—that those open, democratic societies hold the line. Putin cannot be allowed to win.

Even if it is a partial victory, even if it is just to take over a part of Ukraine, it cannot be allowed to happen because the message that sends is an incredibly bad one. Around the world we are already seeing the rise of authoritarian regimes, in some cases regimes that were totalitarian, that seemed to be opening up, such as China, but of course that did not happen; it is still a totalitarian regime, which now threatens Taiwan.

We have seen in Eastern Europe one or two countries also start to shift in that authoritarian direction and of course Russia itself, with the recent passing of Gorbachev, one of the singular people in history who made a difference and the hope that was invested that Russia would become an open and democratic society. That is not the case; we have a deeply authoritarian government. As the member for Taylor said, as a matter of routine opponents disappear or are killed. There is no freedom of the press in Russia. Journalists die on a regular basis. There is very little now in the way of independent media in Russia.

In some ways that brings us to what is going to be incredibly important in Europe. The member for Taylor mentioned the Nord Stream 1 gas pipeline, that conduit for energy between Russia and Germany and other countries. The Russians have now made it abundantly clear that gas is not going to flow until western sanctions are lifted, so Europe is going to be in a world of bother. But it is incredibly important that it does not succumb, that it does not weaken in the face of nasty Putin. They need to hold the line.

When we talk about the freedom of media in western countries, I think we should be paying some attention to the element of social media—if you can call it media—where it is all care and no responsibility. Putin and his acolytes will be using social media in Europe to create as much division and dissent as they possibly can, and it is time that the social media platforms were held to serious account for the information and the misinformation they have a habit of propagating.

It is not going to be an easy time in Europe and it is a lesson, in a way, to all of us. We had some of these lessons through COVID, including not being incredibly reliant upon one country or maybe two when it comes to sovereign manufacturing capacity. Europe made that deal and Germany especially made that deal when it came to relatively cheap gas from Russia. It was a mistake and it is now seen as a profound mistake. Europe needs to diversify its energy supplies and Australia might well be a major beneficiary of that, given that the other approach Europe had was to decarbonise. It might put countries, such as Australia, in an incredibly fortunate position if we can develop commercial-scale green hydrogen.

But let's focus on Ukraine. The number of people internally displaced is now over seven million and the destruction continues. Thousands have died. Five million people from Ukraine have gone to other countries and at the moment Poland is shouldering the greatest burden, with three million people in Poland. It is those states that border or nearly border Russia that have been voicing concerns now for a number of years and, as the member for Taylor said, there was a degree of complacency: 'No, it is not going to happen.' Well, it has happened and it is for all of us in our small ways and in our big ways to do whatever we can to ensure Ukraine is protected.

Of course, the important element is the provision of arms. We are going to have to continue to provide arms. There is no other way. Putin wants to use what is going to happen in Europe this winter to put on enormous pressure and it will be enormous pressure that the governments of Europe are going to face.

We are far away but we still need to do all that we can commensurate with our size and with our resources to support Ukraine and to open our borders to the people of Ukraine who need to settle somewhere else for a period. No doubt some will end up being permanent residents. We need to support those countries that are shouldering a burden when it comes to refugees.

In a lot of respects, it appears that the sort of struggle we are engaged in has a long history. We have faced totalitarian regimes before, whether it is the Soviet Union, whether it is China, or whether it was Nazi Germany in the past. I remember many years ago, because I had an interest in science, I ended up reading a lot of Karl Popper. He wrote something that was more about political philosophy than scientific philosophy. It was about the open society and its enemies.

I have to say that it was a book that changed my view about a number of things. The arguments presented way back then—and it was written in 1945, at the tail end of the Second World War—were about flying the flag for those societies that were not perfect but that were capable of improvement, incremental and otherwise.

It was those societies that were open, democratic societies, because the values that those societies embodied are just so incredibly important. When you look at the alternative, when you look at what is happening in Russia, when you look at what is happening in China, and when you look at what is happening in a number of other countries around the world it is for us all to back what has been developed in a whole raft of nations over many years.

It is societies that actually value dialogue and dissent and deliberation and decision-making based upon that dissent, that deliberation, that dialogue and that ultimate decision-making, because they are powerful societies and societies that are worth making an incredibly strong stand for. That is why we need to do all we can to back Ukraine in its hour of need.

The Hon. K.A. HILDYARD (Reynell—Minister for Child Protection, Minister for Women and the Prevention of Domestic and Family Violence, Minister for Recreation, Sport and Racing) (16:27): I, too, rise to speak in support of this bill. Like all of us in this place and in our community, I have been devastated by recent events in Ukraine and the atrocities that from afar we see being perpetrated on so many people.

My heart goes out to the people of Ukraine who are suffering as they, their families, homes and communities continue to endure the most horrific attacks. I think of them with love and compassion, and I am constantly inspired by their strength and their resilience. In the face of such devastating adversity they are extraordinary.

The horrific attacks and the outrageous breaches of human rights perpetrated by Russian aggression have resulted in the loss of thousands of lives and a humanitarian crisis with approximately 7.1 million people since the invasion of Ukraine internally displaced, according to the Ukraine Internal Displacement Report issued by the Internal Organization for Migration.

According to the United Nations, over five million people have fled their homes desperately seeking safety and peace in neighbouring countries. Also, according to the United Nations as of late April 2022, as the member for Giles has just articulated, Poland has opened its heart and its homes to take in almost three million refugees from Ukraine.

I am really proud of the fact that Australia has also offered safe haven for Ukrainians affected by the conflict, and that as a community we continue to warmly welcome those who have found their way to South Australia. Whilst we are so desperately sorry for the circumstances that have led the people of Ukraine to leave their homes, we welcome them with open arms. Our community is absolutely enriched by their presence.

Many countries around the world have rightly imposed tough economic sanctions on Russia in response to their awful acts of aggression. Many are banning new investments in Russia, freezing the assets of Russian banks and sanctioning Russian financial institutions. Australia has rightly prohibited the import of oil, refined petroleum products, natural gas, coal and other energy products from Russia, as well as prohibiting the supply, sale or transfer of certain luxury goods.

The current situation in Ukraine and resulting Russian sanctions highlighted that the current act does not have a mechanism by which Funds SA can be directed by the government to divest Russian investments. I am really proud of our commitment to amend the Superannuation Funds Management Corporation of South Australia Act 1995 to enable ministerial direction to remove state government funds from Russian assets.

When in opposition, Peter Malinauskas vowed that a Labor government would act swiftly to remove state government funds from Russian investment, stating:

We know this is the right thing to do. It is unconscionable for state government funds and public sector workers' superannuation to be invested in Russian assets.

This bill brings that firm commitment to life. The amendments contained in this bill will enable this to occur in a sensible manner that specifically targets Russian-held investments and enable a direction by the minister for the divestment of Russian assets.

As a former board member of two superannuation funds, I understand and wholeheartedly support the importance of superannuation exercising leadership in responding to and tackling issues our community and world confront and driving ethical investment. These legislative amendments are about supporting Funds SA to do so and ensure that funds are ethically invested.

Funds SA has already divested itself of a significant volume of Russian funds but, given the ongoing sanctions against Russia, divesting assets without incurring significant losses will take time. There is a clear need to enable a direction by the minister to Funds SA for the divestment of remaining Russian assets. The amendments contained in this bill enable us as a government to do what is right, what the public expect of us, and that which signals to the world that we are prepared to act with compassionate and decisive leadership. I commend this bill to the house.

Ms HOOD (Adelaide) (16:32): I rise to speak on the Superannuation Funds Management Corporation of South Australia (Investment in Russian Assets) Amendment Bill. All around the world we have seen the devastating impact of Russia's aggression towards Ukraine and its citizens—the loss of life and creation of a humanitarian crisis causing approximately 7.1 million people to be internally displaced and five million people to flee to neighbouring countries. My heart goes out to the Ukrainian people and my condolences to those who have lost loved ones and who are separated from their loved ones.

South Australia should be proud of the work we have done to welcome Ukrainian refugees into our community. The journey of having to leave your beloved country for a new one is not something that many of us have lived through or will ever live through. I can only imagine what it is like having to escape your home to a completely new one without even knowing the language. Just recently I met Victoria, a Ukrainian refugee who arrived in Australia back in April after escaping war-torn Ukraine.

I am proud the Malinauskas Labor government is supporting refugees like Victoria in starting a new life, with the assistance of TAFE courses to overcome language barriers. The Minister for Education and I recently visited a foundation English TAFE class in Currie Street and met with more than 60 refugee students. It was an incredibly emotional experience; they were just so incredibly impressive and resilient. I want to give a huge shout-out to their lecturer, Tamara, who is fluent in Ukrainian. She has become somewhat of a mother to that group and is giving them so much comfort and support.

Much like other countries around the world, our government has imposed tough economic sanctions and has already prohibited the import of oil, refined petroleum products, natural gas, coal and luxury products from Russia. To remove South Australian support from these Russian industries is to stand up for our South Australian Ukrainian community, which is why it does not make sense to continue to invest our state government funds in public sector superannuation into Russian assets. How can we make war-torn refugees like Victoria truly feel welcomed and supported in our beautiful state if we do not put our money where our mouth is?

To divest our funds in Russian assets in a sensible manner is the right thing to do, and it sends the right message to Ukraine, our Ukrainian arrivals, as well as the existing South Australian Ukrainian community. We stand with you and we support you. I am pleased to support this bill to enable sensible divestment that specifically targets Russian-held investments.

S.E. ANDREWS (Gibson) (16:35): I rise to speak in support of Superannuation Funds Management Corporation of South Australia (Investment in Russian Assets) Amendment Bill 2022. I am proud of all the work the union movement has achieved, particularly the eight-hour day, work health and safety legislation and compulsory superannuation, which was created by workers for workers. It is about fairness and a decent standard of living, but any investment into Russian assets as a part of this is unconscionable.

The events in Ukraine perpetrated by Russian aggression have resulted in the loss of thousands of lives and a humanitarian crisis, with approximately 7.1 million people internally displaced since the invasion of Ukraine, and over five million have fled to neighbouring countries, according to the United Nations. In addition, as of late April 2022, Poland has taken in almost three million refugees alone from Ukraine, an incredible number of people to support.

Most countries around the world have imposed tough economic sanctions on Russia to respond to their acts of aggression, banning new investments in Russia, freezing the assets of Russian banks and sanctioning Russian financial institutions. In addition, Australia has prohibited the import of oil, refined petroleum products, natural gas, coal and other energy products from Russia as well as prohibiting the sale or transfer of certain luxury goods.

The current war in Ukraine and resulting Russian sanctions highlighted that the current act does not have a mechanism by which Funds SA can be directed by the government to divest Russian investments. The opposition, during the 2022 state election campaign committed to amending the Superannuation Funds Management Corporation of South Australia Act 1995 to enable ministerial direction for the removal of state government funds from Russian assets.

It is after a lifetime of work that all Australians deserve a comfortable retirement. For most people, their superannuation will play an important part in helping them secure a modest lifestyle. They have worked so hard, committed so much, and their super investments should be ones they are comfortable with. Today, almost every worker has the right to their own superannuation account, but that right would not exist had it not been for the campaigns fought by union members in the 1970s and 1980s.

Superannuation initially was deeply unfair, with fewer than one in four women and blue-collar workers having an account. High income earners, such as permanent public servants and full-time white-collar workers, were more likely to have superannuation. But, thanks to the campaigning and hard work of union members, a system of compulsory superannuation began operating in 1992. Unions also played a part in establishing industry funds. These are low-cost profit-to-member superannuation funds dedicated to putting the interests of members first.

Today, approximately five million Australian workers are members of industry funds, and these funds manage hundreds of billions of dollars of workers' contributions. Funds SA is the primary investment facilitator for public sector super funds. Funds SA has already divested itself of a significant volume of Russian funds but, given the ongoing sanctions against Russia, divesting assets without incurring significant losses will take time.

There is a clear need to enable a direction by the minister to Funds SA for the divestment of remaining Russian assets. This bill addresses these concerns, and the amendments contained in the bill enable the divestment to occur in a sensible manner that specifically targets Russian-held investments. The amendments contained in this bill enable us, as a government, to do what the public expect of us. Whilst in opposition, leader Peter Malinauskas vowed that a Labor government would act swiftly to remove state government funds from Russian investment, stating:

We know this is the right thing to do. It is unconscionable for state government funds and public sector workers' superannuation to be invested in Russian assets.

The amendments contained in this bill will enable this to occur in a sensible manner that specifically targets Russian-held investments and will enable a direction by the minister for the divestment of Russian assets. I commend this amendment bill to the house.

Mr ODENWALDER (Elizabeth) (16:40): I rise to make a brief contribution to this bill, the Superannuation Funds Management Corporation of South Australia (Investment in Russian Assets) Amendment Bill 2022. I am no expert, and I listened with interest to the first of our speeches today, particularly from the member for Taylor, who outlined very succinctly the geopolitical forces we are dealing with, or particularly Europeans are dealing with, at this time. He made the very pertinent point that these types of people, people like Putin, people like other fascist and totalitarian dictators, simply will not stop.

They will not be appeased. We learnt this—well, we hoped we learnt this—in World War II and we are learning it again now. Hopefully, we have learned those lessons and we are behaving in a way that shows that free, liberal, democratic societies will not bend to fascist totalitarian dictatorships. This bill, and the actions of this government, and hopefully this parliament, reflect that we in our small but vocal corner of the world can add to that resistance.

I am proud to be a member of this government for many reasons, but rarely have I been prouder than the moment our leader, the member for Croydon, the Premier, stood up at an event (I cannot remember if it was a press event) where he was asked some questions and he came out very strongly, very strongly indeed, about the need for a bill like this and actions like this to show that, first of all, we will not stand for totalitarian aggression, Russian aggression.

We all have an interest here, as we all pay into a state superannuation fund, as the member for Gibson articulated. We all have an interest and so do many thousands of workers. There is no way that our funds should be used to prop up and facilitate wars of aggression that are so counter to the ideals of the United Nations that we all claim to hold dear. I was very proud when Peter Malinauskas stood up at this event and articulated the Labor Party's position before the election on this and promised a bill of this sort. He went on to say:

We know this is the right thing to do. It is unconscionable for state government funds and public sector workers' superannuation to be invested in Russian assets.

This bill, which I hope will pass, will go into committee stage shortly, as I understand that the opposition reasonably has questions. I hope that we will all join together in passing this bill and sending not only a message but also a very clear financial signal that we will not tolerate this sort of behaviour.

Again, the member for Taylor articulated very strongly that this sort of aggression should not be tolerated, but he also very correctly pointed out that there were signals coming not only from the US and the UK, and clearly from Ukraine, but also from within Russia, from within what we would call in a liberal democracy an opposition but which we might more reasonably call a resistance to Putin and his fellow aggressors.

I want to quote at some length from an article by Alexei Navalny, a senior figure in that Russian opposition, who was himself a victim of the dark statecraft that Russia employs across Europe and that it has employed for many, many years, or at least since the Cold War. He gave very clear signals at the time that Russia would not stop—or more particularly Putin, because I do not want to mix Putin up with the Russian people who, one must assume, are largely not in favour of this kind of aggression. I will quote from him:

Exactly one year ago, I did not die from poisoning by a chemical weapon, and it would seem that corruption played no small part in my survival. Having contaminated Russia's state system, corruption has also contaminated the intelligence services. When a country's senior management is preoccupied with protection rackets and extortion from businesses, the quality of covert operations inevitably suffers. A group of FSB agents applied the nerve agent to my underwear just as shoddily as they incompetently dogged my footsteps for three and half years—in violation of all instructions from above—allowing civil investigating activists to expose them at every turn.

To be fair, a regime based on corruption can perform more elementary tasks to perfection. The judicial system—the first thing autocrats intent on robbing their nation take control of—functions perfectly on a quid pro quo basis. That is why, when I went back to Russia after medical treatment, I was taken straight from the plane to prison. There is not much to celebrate in that, but at least I now have time to read the memoirs of world leaders.

In those books, the world's leaders write terribly interestingly about how they solved the main problems facing humankind: wars, poverty, migration, the climate crisis, weapons of mass destruction. These are the issues on the 'big agenda'. The fight against corruption, on the other hand, rarely figures as part of what they hope will be their legacy. This is not surprising; it is a 'secondary agenda' item.

Amazingly enough, though, corruption nearly always merits a mention when the world's leaders are describing failures—whether their own or, more commonly, those of their predecessors.

'We spent years, hundreds of billions of dollars and thousands of human lives in Iraq...but the corrupt government of al-Maliki [or Karzai, you name them] alienated the people with its thieving, opening the path to victory to radicals armed with slogans about honest, fair government and RPGs.'

This leads to an obvious question...if corruption is preventing us from finding solutions to the problem of the 'big agenda', has the time perhaps come to raise it [to] a priority on that agenda?

It is not difficult to see why that has not already been done. Corruption is a tricky issue to discuss at global summits. Suppose you are discussing Syria and cyber-attacks with Vladimir Putin. Everyone finds it interesting, everyone knows where they are. At the concluding news conference everyone will have something to say.

Now imagine a meeting with Putin on the issue of corruption. The very fact it has been raised represents a move to personalities. The whole thing, from start to finish, is awkward. The richest leader in the world, who has fleeced his own country, is being invited to discuss how to deal with the problem of himself. Very tricky, very awkward.

Now turn on the news. It is precisely the fact that the West 'failed to notice' the total corruption in Afghanistan—that Western leaders preferred not to talk about a topic they found embarrassing—which was the most crucial factor in the victory of the Taliban...The West did not want to discuss the plundering of the budget; it was much better to focus on people being stoned to death or execution by beheading.

After the implosion of the USSR and the end of the global ideological confrontation, it was corruption—in its classical definition, 'the exploitation of an official position for personal gain'—that became the universal, ideology-free basis for the flourishing of a new Authoritarian International, from Russia to Eritrea, Myanmar to Venezuela. And corruption has long ceased to be merely an internal problem of those countries. It is almost invariably one of the main causes of the global challenges that face the West.

Navalny then poses a question:

A new 'hot' war in Europe with the use of air strikes and artillery? That is Putin taking revenge on Ukraine—and this is August 2021, before a single soldier had been mobilised—for the anticorruption revolution that deposed his protégé Viktor Yanukovich. Religious extremists of all stripes find it easier to conduct propaganda when their opponents are driving Rolls-Royces through the streets of penniless countries. Migration crises are caused by poverty, and poverty is almost always caused by corruption.

'It's just as well climate change is unrelated to corruption!' you may ironically reflect. I invite you to say that in the face of the millions of hectares of Siberian forest that burn every year because of barbaric total clearance, violating the fire regulations for forest management. I am reluctant to make this prediction, but fear the next big terrorist attack will not be just another bomb blast by religious fanatics but, for example, a chemical weapon in the water supply network of a major city or a devastating attack on the IT infrastructure of an entire country, and that those commissioning the terrorism will be one or other of the people in possession of a golden palace. The reason for perpetrating it will be to divert the world's attention from golden palaces to global security issues.

So it is not we who should feel awkward about confronting corrupt authoritarians with tough questions and getting personal but, on the contrary, they who should know that their shady dealings will invariably be the main focus of discussion at world summits. That would be a crucial step towards eliminating the root cause of many 'big' issues.

While we have, at last count (and this was a while ago now) somewhere around the vicinity of 7.1 million people displaced in Ukraine as a result of Russian aggression, and while we have many, many thousands dying and continuing to die each day—and the new cycle ebbs and flows—it is incumbent on all of us to do our bit, however small.

Australia, of course, has prohibited the import of oil, refined petroleum products, natural gas, coal and other energy products from Russia and it has prohibited the sale and supply of certain luxury goods, and this of course is to be commended. I, too, stand with the member for Taylor in that I believe that there is always more that the Australian government could do in terms of the armament of Ukraine and the military support of Ukraine in their fight against Russian aggression.

In the case of this bill, I do commend the Premier and the Treasurer for bringing it to the house. It is important that we all, in our small way, contribute to the fight against aggression in whatever form it might take, and financial warfare is often the most effective in dealing with authoritarian dictators. I commend the bill.

Mrs PEARCE (King) (16:52): I, too, rise to speak on this bill. I am sure that no-one in this place would disagree that the events in Ukraine perpetrated by Russian aggression are nothing less than devastating. It is immoral, a violation of international law and it needs to stop. I am so proud that this government has taken a stand. Too many lives have been lost, too many people have been displaced and too many people are now in dire need of humanitarian assistance. I cannot begin to fathom the extent of the trauma that has been experienced and, like many in my community, would like to support Ukraine in any way possible, and it starts with this bill.

The legislation before us today will send a clear signal to Russia and its supporters that Russia's actions have severe political, economic and reputational consequences. We cannot be investing money into this country as these atrocities occur. It is clear that our stand has been noticed, as shortly after introducing the legislation our Premier was blacklisted by Russian President Vladimir Putin, which means he cannot visit Russia. Since then, I understand there have been others in this place who have also made the list.

It just goes to show that we will not be bullied. Our Premier has stood firm and this government will continue to stand with Ukraine. This legislation bans state government investment in Russian assets, which will give us the power to divest $60 million worth of South Australia workers' super held in Russian assets by Funds SA. It was something we promised to do and something we have prioritised as we understand how much it means to our state.

But we have not stopped there. We have sent medical equipment to Ukraine to support local hospitals and healthcare workers to provide emergency care to thousands of wounded civilians. These items included laryngeal masks, first aid, wound dressings and pulse oximeters. We are also welcoming Ukrainian refugees and advocating to take in more, and we are supporting them to start a new life here in South Australia not just with language skills but with a support system in place that encourages community and opportunity, because our community expects no less.

We do not want to watch in horror what is happening and sit idly by. I must say that I have been impressed by the many things I am seeing in my community to support Ukraine. There is a fantastic stallholder at the One Tree Hill market who makes her own earrings. In support of Ukraine, she made heart studs in their colours to raise awareness and show her support. In fact, I have worn these earrings in this place before and would have today except little miss decided she liked them too and broke one by accident. I hope to visit her stall again next month to get a couple more replacement pairs, just in case.

I also have a community centre in Salisbury East whose members took the time to sit down with me to share their desires and plans to support Ukrainian families to settle in. One of the members there is Ukrainian and is absolutely determined to ensure that they receive as much support to settle in as possible. They are offering a coffee and a chat every Monday between 10am and 12pm for anyone who is interested. If you are near bus route 560 or 502, just hop off at stop 46B.

Then there was the way local businesses, sporting clubs and residents rallied together to raise much-needed funds to support displaced families in Adelaide at a recent dinner at Sfera's hosted by the Association of Ukrainians in SA. What a night that was! The Volya Ukrainian Cossack Dancers were incredible, and I do not think there was a dry eye in the place when some of the displaced families took the time to share with us their harrowing experiences.

I thank the many members of parliament, including the Minister for Multicultural Affairs, the member for Florey, the assistant minister to the Premier, the member for Playford, the member for Newland, the member for Makin and others, who were in attendance to show their support in the north-east that evening. I am proud of all the efforts being shown to support Ukraine at a local, state and national level. We do it because we know it is the right thing to do and, with that, I commend this bill to the house.

Bill read a second time.

Committee Stage

In committee.

Clause 1.

Mr COWDREY: As we enter committee, I take the opportunity to reconfirm the remarks that were made prior to the winter break in regard to this bill. I also reconfirm the opposition's support for the bill brought here today. Also, prior to the commencement of questions, I would like to make it clear that any questions put forward by the opposition are to try to seek some further clarity in regard to the operational aspects of the bill, and by no means are they intended to have any reflection on our support for the intent and prospects of this bill.

I begin with a question in regard to clause 1, which I imagine the Treasurer will be able to answer reasonably quickly. Who was consulted prior to the introduction of the bill to the house?

The Hon. S.C. MULLIGHAN: I thank the member for not only his question but his approach and support for what the bill is trying to achieve. Following the election, most of my efforts in terms of consultation were undertaken primarily with Funds SA and to a lesser extent the Department of Treasury and Finance.

Mr COWDREY: In regard to the bill, is the Treasurer able to identify for the committee what he would anticipate to be the level of conflict or the threshold that he would imagine the government would recognise as meeting similar legislation in regard to a direction to Funds SA into the future?

The Hon. S.C. MULLIGHAN: I cannot be specific about that. Perhaps one way in which I can answer that question is by reflecting on this circumstance and the fact that this is, as far as I am aware, the first war being fought on continental European soil, as I understand it, since World War II, which is clearly a first in my lifetime and also the experience of many not only South Australians but also Australians and people around the globe. The literal shock that many of us experienced when Russia took the extraordinary decision to invade Ukraine meant that there was an appetite to understand what sort of action a jurisdiction like South Australia might be able to take in this regard.

This is not the only action. There are a lot of other efforts that are going on both within government and across the broader South Australian community, particularly in terms of supporting the local and international Ukrainian population: messages of support, providing humanitarian aid where possible and so on. I think what quickly became clear was that there was to be a consideration by other countries of financial sanctions, amongst other sanctions, and that Australia, at both the national and subnational jurisdictional level, had a high appetite for participating in those sorts of activities.

In that respect, given that a large proportion of the global community was acting in this same way and that there was an appetite across global financial markets for this sort of activity, that was really what triggered us. I would hope there is not a need for this sort of activity again in the future because perhaps that might signify that we would not see this sort of broadscale global conflict again.

As I am sure the executive of Funds SA, let alone the board members, appreciate even better than I, this activity is not entered into lightly because it creates an inherent tension between the role of the executive and the board of Funds SA being able to act in a completely unfettered manner with the management and investment decisions of funds under its control, aside from what we are dealing with today—that is, a fetter of that activity and a control of that activity. That is perhaps the best way I can answer that for the benefit of the member and the house.

Mr COWDREY: What mitigating actions, if any, were taken to ensure that the bill adheres to the principles of trustee government under the Superannuation Industry (Supervision) Act 1993?

The Hon. S.C. MULLIGHAN: That is a good question because it goes to the heart of the inherent tension that I obliquely referred to before. Of course, rightly so, fund managers are subject to pretty rigorous regulation at the national level. Fundamentally within that, and also with the obligations of directors of an organisation like Funds SA, there are fiduciary obligations that board members have under the Corporations Act.

Part of the challenge of being able to draft this bill was trying to ensure that there were no intrusions on the requirements and the provisions of those regulatory entities insofar as they relate to board members but at the same time give effect to the sorts of activities that I spoke about in my previous answer; that is, sovereign nations and financial organisations within those nations are able to take activities like this to separately and collectively place financial pressure on Russia.

We think we have the balance right. It was something that was certainly discussed between me and the executive leadership of Funds SA and the leadership of the board to make sure that we enabled the corporation and those individuals who had responsible roles in the corporation to discharge their duties consistent with those regulatory requirements but that we could give effect to the sorts of actions that the community expected of us.

Mr BASHAM: What concerns did the board and management of Funds SA raise with the government about the impact of investment returns and potential conflict with the terms outlined in the heads of government agreement?

The Hon. S.C. MULLIGHAN: That is a good question. There are two elements to that. The concern about investment returns is that, if there were an overt direction, if I can put it like that, to take a particular course of action, regardless of other considerations that the board might otherwise have, that could lead to the board taking action that would engender a financial loss to the corporation. For example, if there were a blanket requirement that any interest in an asset that could be conceivably called Russian had to be immediately divested, regardless of the circumstances or consequence, that would absolutely heighten a risk of incurring financial losses.

As members opposite might appreciate, I tried to be quite up-front that there are both directly held investments, where in theory the corporation can make a direct decision about how to deal with those investments, and there are indirectly held interests in assets that could be described as Russian, where divestment is not quite so possible.

For example, we may have an interest in a pooled fund and within that pool of assets that that investment fund holds there may be a number of assets and it is, by definition, impossible for Funds SA, only having a partial interest in that fund, to reach into that pool of assets and divest itself of those particular Russian assets. If there had been a direction, for example, in that circumstance where Funds SA was immediately required to divest of that particular asset, that would certainly heighten the risk of an investment loss.

Feel free to jump up and refresh me if I get this wrong, but I think the first part of your question was about a conflict that a board or board members may have—

Mr COWDREY: Any concerns.

The Hon. S.C. MULLIGHAN: Any concerns. The concern was—perhaps I have made a Freudian slip there—that there would be a conflict or a tension with the board's fiduciary responsibility to the corporation. The overall task of Funds SA is to try to maximise returns on stakeholders' funds that are invested through the corporation. There could be a tension between that obligation and then a direction from the parliament or from the minister to take action, which would be at significant variance to that.

I think I am right in saying that that was a principal concern that was raised in the consultation, and it became a challenge. Hopefully, what you see before you is a demonstration that it was not an insurmountable challenge, but it became a challenge to get the drafting of this right so that we did not inherently compromise the Funds SA directors, let alone its executive management, in being able to carry out its fiduciary obligations to the corporation let alone their obligations to stakeholders in the corporation.

Mr BASHAM: What will be the result for the corporation if it is unable to comply with the directions in subclause (5)? What will be the result if the corporation cannot comply with that?

The Hon. S.C. MULLIGHAN: If I jump ahead in the bill, clause 3 tries to set out, I guess, for want of a better term, a chain of reasoning or an approach to how such a direction may be given effect. Clause 3 new subsection (3) talks about a ministerial direction specifically being about this current circumstance that we are talking about with regard to Russian assets.

However, the protection for those fiduciary obligations of members of the corporation, both board members and also the executive, is in clause 3 new subsection (4), which requires that any action taken by the corporation in accordance with the direction under new subsection (3), that is, a direction from the minister, must be taken prudently and consistently with the corporation's responsibilities to the entities for whom it invests and manages funds.

The corporation is still allowed a discretion in trying to carry out that direction from the minister that it only does so prudently and consistently with the obligations it has to shareholders' funds. That, I think, is an important protection for the board and for the executive in not thrusting them into a course of action they would feel is imprudent or not in accordance with their obligations either legally or what they understand to be their obligations to their shareholders.

Mr BASHAM: For clarification, I am trying to understand what their actions are if they are unable to get rid of those funds.

The Hon. S.C. MULLIGHAN: I am sorry. I apologise to the member for Finniss because he did say that in his initial question. I do not think I answered it. Perhaps I can answer that by admitting that we are confronted with that very circumstance right now, for example, with regard to some of the pooled funds that Funds SA has an interest in.

We are also, as I understand it, confronted by this in some respects because if Russian assets are frozen, if there are onerous financial sanctions on Russian financial assets, then it is impossible to trade in them. So, if you try to sell something you clearly need a buyer for it, and if there are broadscale sanctions on Russian assets it is very difficult, if not impossible, to find a buyer for those assets.

In some circumstances with regard to some asset holdings, the corporation is confronted by this at the moment in the same way that other jurisdictions and other funds are undertaking exactly the same efforts are stuck with this as well. So, where does it leave the corporation being unable to discharge that legal obligation here? Some may disagree with this assessment. I would like to think that the protection provided in new subsection (4) in clause 3 enables them only to take that activity when it is prudent.

It may be possible to find a buyer for Russian assets in the circumstance where Western countries and funds, and interested financial parties located in Western countries, are unwilling or unable to purchase those assets. It may still be possible to find a buyer outside of those Western countries and outside of those sorts of funds. For example, you may be able to find a buyer for them in a country or with a fund that is aligned more to a Russian interest than to a Western interest, if I can put it like that. But that may not accord with what the board and the executive feel is a prudent way of divesting of those assets.

Mr BASHAM: What is the current level of divested funds?

The Hon. S.C. MULLIGHAN: The current valuation of all assets, I understand, is $10.6 million; that fluctuates. For example, when this issue was first raised publicly before the last state election, the previous Treasurer put a figure out of $60 million. A couple of things have happened since then: there has been some level of divestment, but there has also been a significant revaluation of the remaining assets.

As far as I understand it, the $10.6 million is largely, if not completely, a reflection of the value of the assets held within those pooled fund arrangements—the assets which we would class as being indirectly held. There are other assets which are still held by Funds SA directly that do not have any value at all—their value has been written down to zero—and that largely reflects the incapacity to trade in them to find a buyer for them, hence them having no value.

To clarify, while my answer was correct for the directly held, for the pooled funds there is a combination of assets which have some value contributing to that $10.6 million, but there are also some assets held indirectly that have a value of zero as well.

Clause passed.

Clause 2.

Mr COWDREY: Treasurer, does this bill set a precedent for the government to direct Funds SA in the future around other issues?

The Hon. S.C. MULLIGHAN: Yes, that is a good question. That was a concern that the board and Funds SA had, and I had as well. That is why the bill has been drafted specifically with reference to Russian assets, to make sure this new capacity for a minister only relates to this circumstance with Russia. Certainly, if I can speak for the board and the executive, they would be highly uncomfortable with a minister having an ongoing general capacity to direct what investments are made.

I may be wrong in this, but when the legislation was first established for the corporation I think it has always been the case that the corporation and the board have been free from ministerial direction, so this is quite an incursion in that regard. As a general rule, as I have referenced before, I would be uncomfortable, whether it is me or somebody else, being the minister responsible having the power for direction outside this sort of very specific circumstance.

Mr COWDREY: What impact will the bill and associated direction have on other SA government superannuation schemes, for instance ReturnToWorkSA, Public Trustee, Police Super, ElectricSuper, SA Metropolitan Fire Service?

The Hon. S.C. MULLIGHAN: My advice is that ReturnToWork, the Public Trustee and the electricity industry superannuation scheme do not have their funds managed by Funds SA, so the impact on those organisations is not apparent. In terms of Super SA and the other organisations that do, each of those organisations have their own investment strategy. My understanding is they share the same investment strategy, they have the same exposure to international securities, and so the impact on them is the same as each other.

Mr COWDREY: As a point of clarification, for the three funds that were listed first—the ElectricSuper fund and the other two in the first class—is it possible that members of those schemes but also public servants, for instance, within those schemes still have superannuation investments in Russian assets that are not being divested under this direction?

The Hon. S.C. MULLIGHAN: With regard to superannuation funds—and, obviously, we can put ReturnToWork and Public Trustee to one side because they are a different type of organisation as they do not have superannuants—the electricity industry, I am advised, have a separate arrangement for managing their funds on behalf of their members, which is not conducted through Funds SA, but Super SA do, Police Super does and firefighters superannuation does. They are similarly affected by the exposure to international equities and within those international equities exposure to Russian assets. Because we have not divested of all of those assets and there have been writedowns to zero, or significant writedowns from previous values, to that extent they are impacted by these arrangements. Those superannuation schemes, by extension, have exposure to those and they have not yet been divested, for the reasons that I have articulated.

Mr COWDREY: If I understand the Treasurer's answers provided to date, if all the funds that essentially can be divested at this point in time have—mind you, without the legislation being enacted—how long does the government expect the power to direct will be required for?

The Hon. S.C. MULLIGHAN: I cannot be specific about that. We do not know how long the war is going to persist and what the outcome of that is going to be, for starters, but I guess the question is motivated by an interest in how long this arrangement is going to continue. Part of the reason for having new subsections (5) and (6) in clause 3 were to require the regular review of this, and not only for me to have a copy of that but for it to be in the annual report so members of parliament will see, at least on an annual basis, what is going on with the operation of this new regime.

I cannot be specific. If the war ends quickly then that may necessitate a change in strategy as perhaps there would be changes in financial markets, depending of course on what the outcome of the war is. However, while it continues, we certainly envisage the continued operation of this section, and obviously the irregular reporting requirement.

Should things change very significantly over there, where the Western world does not regard Russia in the same way that it is being regarded, then that perhaps might be a trigger for us and the other sovereign nations and subnational jurisdictions to change their approach, and perhaps we would repeal this section of the act at that time. In the meantime, that ongoing monitoring and reporting regime has been intended to try to provide all members and the community some comfort as to how it is operating.

Clause passed.

Clause 3.

Mr COWDREY: Could the Treasurer provide a little bit more detail in terms of the government's definition of 'divestment' for the purposes of the bill? I know we have spoken previously about the pooled funds, that the government has still been unable to divest themselves of shareholdings within those funds that are obviously independently managed.

In regard to the total funds that are being divested to date, are you able to give us an idea of the proportion of those funds that have effectively been devalued or written off, or where the portion of ownership for the state government has been valued at zero, and perhaps the portion of ownership for another player or party within that fund that has effectively taken ownership of that portion of the pooled fund? I imagine this is how this is being managed to an extent.

In terms of direct ownership, we are talking about non-liquid funds, I imagine. Are we are talking about infrastructure and other sorts of investments or all of the investment that remains effectively in pooled funds where we have not been able to write down or change ownership within the pool?

The Hon. S.C. MULLIGHAN: I need to be clear, in answering this question, that the figures I am about to quote are estimates. The reason I say that is not that we only have rough information: it is that our information is not current. It relies on us getting reports back from the fund managers that are engaged by Funds SA, and sometimes the information is weeks out of date.

So, of the directly held, three have been sold and 19 are left. When we talk about directly held investments, these are investments held in Funds SA's name that it is able to deal with directly. When we are talking about indirectly held, these are securities or investments that are not held in Funds SA's name, and the example I will use are pooled funds, which are constructed and managed by a third party. We might hold a number of units within that fund, but certainly not own it in its entirety.

There are 52 securities within a number of pooled funds; 21 of those securities have been written to zero value and 31 have some remnant value as at our latest update. That is where the $10.6 million of remnant value lies. It is not so much that the pooled funds are held in what you would normally consider to be illiquid assets like infrastructure or that sort of thing. I guess it is perhaps worth thinking through the illiquid concept: they are illiquid because you cannot deal with them. They are unable to be traded.

Mr COWDREY: As as a point of clarification, we have sold three of the directly held and maintained 19. We have attributed no value to those assets at this point in time, based on there not being a market, I assume. We have determined no value for them at this point in time?

The Hon. S.C. MULLIGHAN: Yes, that is largely right. The inability to trade in them is the contributing factor to them having zero value. Once liquidity returns to those parts of the financial markets, then their valuation will be reassessed. It is important to understand that that practice of providing zero valuation to them is, I am advised, I guess industry standard practice, but also consistent with Funds SA's own valuation policies.

Mr COWDREY: Does Funds SA have a view as to when they expect to have full divestment of those assets? Essentially, I imagine, without answering my own question, it is going to be dependent on when liquidity comes back to the market. If I could also add a second part to the question, going back to the definition of divestment, we talked about originally $60 million to $70 million worth of assets going down to now $10 million worth of value. Most of that is writedowns as opposed to actual divestment of the assets essentially, so for the purposes of this bill can you clarify how Super SA is regarding divestment in terms of there being net zero value to any assets held or divestment of all ownership?

The Hon. S.C. MULLIGHAN: It is a good question, and it is an important thing to clarify that divestment is not making sure that we have zero value of Russian assets within the entirety of the portfolio. It is making sure that we, perhaps for want of a better term, no longer have a holding or an interest in that investment. It is actually not having it anymore rather than just having it with a zero value.

In terms of when that is going to happen, no, we do not have a time frame for that because it requires the capacity to be able to divest of it and, as we have discussed previously, find a buyer for it. The experience has been that in many cases it has been impossible to do that. I am guessing that the three that were able to be divested of happened some time ago and it is the 19 that have been difficult to divest of subsequently.

Mr COWDREY: This is less of a question and more of a comment. Can I extend thanks to Funds SA for their approach to date. I think their quick actions, as has just been referenced, have been helpful to at least divest ourselves of those assets that were able to be quickly, at a time when most international markets were effectively closing very quickly. Can I extend our thanks to Funds SA for their actions so far in the circumstances. Obviously, independent of government they have been able to reflect the wishes and the views of the community pretty well. Thank you very much.

*Estimates RepliesACQUIRE AND RESTORE

In reply to the Hon. D.J. SPEIRS (Black—Leader of the Opposition) (23 June 2022). (Estimates Committee A)

The Hon. S.E. CLOSE (Port Adelaide—Deputy Premier, Minister for Industry, Innovation and Science, Minister for Defence and Space Industries, Minister for Climate, Environment and Water): I have been advised:

The $1.9 million over two years to acquire and restore includes both the purchase price of the portion of Field River Valley which was formerly privately owned ($1,350,000), and the operating initiatives following acquisition ($500,000). The operating initiatives involve planning and restoration works largely led by Green Adelaide, who are working alongside community and project partners to ensure Field River is appropriately managed and protected. The Field River Restoration Plan, which is currently under development, will be a key driver of this work.

ADELAIDE DOLPHIN SANCTUARY

In reply to the Hon. D.J. SPEIRS (Black—Leader of the Opposition) (23 June 2022). (Estimates Committee A)

The Hon. S.E. CLOSE (Port Adelaide—Deputy Premier, Minister for Industry, Innovation and Science, Minister for Defence and Space Industries, Minister for Climate, Environment and Water): I have been advised:

Two studies are being undertaken with Flinders University as a part of the ADS investigation.

The first is an Honours project on 'Fishes as indicators of dolphin health within the Adelaide Dolphin Sanctuary, South Australia'. This study aims to evaluate the potential health risks to dolphins arising from consumption of prey within the Adelaide Dolphin Sanctuary (ADS). The prey items will be tested for the presence of bacteria or chemical contamination (e.g. trace metals, biotoxin or other chemicals).

This honours student project is expected to be complete by December 2023.

The second Flinders University project is a collaboration with Adelaide University that will form the basis of a PhD. The project ADS 'Dolphin Health and Port River study' will work to elucidate the causes of morbidity and mortality in the ADS dolphins. It will also broadly examine the health and threats to health and welfare of dolphin species across South Australia through:

- Assessing the health status of live ADS dolphins by examining their body condition and early signs of disease
- Assessing the relationship between environmental pathogens and pathogen profiles detected in sick/dead dolphins, as examined by metagenomics
- Examining water quality and environment parameters in the Port River and Barker Inlet ecosystem during 2022-23 as part of the disease investigation process
- Identifying environmental and biological factors affecting mortality of dolphins in the ADS and adjacent waters by building a model which combines multiple potential variables.

This project is expected to be complete by June 2023.

LOWER LIMESTONE COAST, WATER ALLOCATION PLAN

In reply to the Hon. D.J. SPEIRS (Black—Leader of the Opposition) (23 June 2022). (Estimates Committee A)

The Hon. S.E. CLOSE (Port Adelaide—Deputy Premier, Minister for Industry, Innovation and Science, Minister for Defence and Space Industries, Minister for Climate, Environment and Water): I have been advised:

The $800,000 allocated in the Mid-Year Budget Review and the review committed to by the South Australian Government are the same process, being the comprehensive review of the Lower Limestone Coast Water Allocation Plan required by the Landscape South Australia Act 2019. A water allocation plan review evaluates the plan and considers whether it remains appropriate or requires amendment. If, in consultation with stakeholders, an amendment is identified as being required, the plan will then be revised. The review is currently scheduled to conclude in December 2023, with reports to be made publicly available shortly after. Should the review find that amendment to the current plan is required, the amendment process will commence in 2024.

The $800,000 contribution to the review of the Lower Limestone Coast Water Allocation Plan is critical as it will support the groundwater modelling and monitoring required to update the science that supports the plan. The funding accelerates the review of the current plan, which means that any amendment, if required, can be brought into effect earlier.

Additional funding to support the review process comes from the Limestone Coast Landscape Board. These funds support staff resources, stakeholder and community consultation and additional studies required to support the review. The scale of investment needed will depend on whether the plan is required to be amended.

The Limestone Coast Landscape Board publicly announced the commencement of the review on 12 July 2022. Extensive communication has already occurred, including letters to all licence holders, industry peak bodies, councils and key Government entities. An open expression of interest process for membership on a Stakeholder Advisory Group was also announced with the terms of reference, role of the Stakeholder Advisory Group and process to select the Group publicly available. The Stakeholder Advisory Group will include members who represent the diversity of community, environment, primary production and industry in the Lower Limestone Coast.

The newly announced review will not duplicate the previous review. The science review of the 2013 Lower Limestone Coast Water Allocation Plan specifically reviewed the science underpinning the reductions.

The Hon. K.J. MAHER (Minister for Aboriginal Affairs, Attorney-General, Minister for Industrial Relations and Public Sector): I have been advised:

The Fair Work Act 1994 (SA) encourages and facilitates the making of enterprise agreements about remuneration, conditions of employment and other industrial matters¹.

Enterprise bargaining outcomes may include wage and salary changes as well as changes to employment conditions.

Enterprise bargaining negotiations are specific to the particular process and circumstances. The objective is to reach reasonable outcomes in each negotiation process. Because each enterprise bargaining process varies, it is not possible to provide an average wage increase assumption as a percentage each year across the forward estimates; even if it were, it would not be appropriate for me to disclose it. Any state budget assumption or projection is a matter for the Treasurer.

RETURN TO WORKSA

In reply to Mr COWDREY (Colton) (21 June 2022). (Estimates Committee A)

The Hon. K.J. MAHER (Minister for Aboriginal Affairs, Attorney-General, Minister for Industrial Relations and Public Sector): I have been advised:

ReturnToWorkSA estimate that either the current bill or the original bill would restore the funding ratio to be within the targeted range of 90 per cent – 120 per cent. The calculation of the funding ratio is dependent upon the completion of the actuarial valuation and the funding ratio will also reflect changes in investment markets, inflation and discount rates. Work on the valuation of the scheme's outstanding claims liability at 30 June 2022 is underway as part of the standard cycle of actuarial valuations that occur each year.

ReturnToWorkSA estimate that had the original bill passed it would have been in a position to hold premiums at around the current 1.80 per cent. It was also estimated at the time that the original Bill would have delivered a funding ratio of approximately 95 per cent.

The government's efforts to keep premiums below 2 per cent contrast with the former Liberal Government's approach, which was to do nothing in response to the cost pressures created by the Summerfield decision.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL'S DEPARTMENT

In reply to Mr TARZIA (Hartley) (21 June 2022). (Estimates Committee A)

The Hon. K.J. MAHER (Minister for Aboriginal Affairs, Attorney-General, Minister for Industrial Relations and Public Sector): I have been advised that for units under my responsibility within the Attorney-General's Department (including the Public Trustee):

AGD business units are expected to minimise expenditure on consultancies, with the engagement of a consultant only to be made in specialised circumstances, and on an 'as needs' basis.

Expenditure on consultancies in 2022-23 is expected to be approximately $1 million.

This includes the development of a strategic business case which will identify options for future accommodation needs for both Forensic Science SA and the SAPOL Forensic Services Branch.

This estimate for 2022-23 does not include any possible increase from Business Units that transferred into the Department from 1 July 2022 following the recent machinery of government changes.

The following is a summary of external consultants that have been engaged to date at a total estimated cost above $10,000, the nature of work undertaken, and the estimated cost for 2022-23.

Consultancies	Purpose	2022-23 Estimated Cost
John Mansfield AM QC	Review of SafeWorkSA investigation	$ 8,740
Swanbury Penglase Architects	Scoping report on future accommodation needs for State Records SA	$ 28,105
Pricewaterhouse Coopers (PwC)	Strategic business case on future accommodation needs for Forensic Science SA and SAPol Forensic Services Branch	Exempt from disclosure in accordance with Cabinet Circular 027

The majority of expenditure on contractors within AGD is related to the engagement of temporary labour hire. AGD business units are expected to minimise expenditure on contractors, with the engagement of contractors on an 'as needs' basis to assist with managing vacancies and turnover in the workforce.

After reviewing expenditure on contractors in the past three financial years, and allowing for machinery of government changes and once-off projects, it is estimated that expenditure on contractors in 2022-23 may be approximately $1.5 million.

This estimate for 2022-23 does not include any possible increase from business units that transferred into the department from 1 July 2022 following the recent machinery of government changes.

The following is a summary of external contractors that have been engaged to date at a total estimated cost above $10,000, the nature of work undertaken, and the estimated cost for 2022-23.

Contractors	Purpose	2022-23 Estimated Cost
Temporary labour hire agencies (various)	Short-term engagements to assist with managing vacancies and turnover in the workforce.	TBC

The Hon. A. KOUTSANTONIS (West Torrens—Minister for Infrastructure and Transport, Minister for Energy and Mining):

I am advised that the South Eastern Freeway Managed Motorway Stage 2 Project will include moveable centre barrier gates. These gates will be located at approximately one to two-kilometre intervals, on the first eight kilometres of the Freeway (from the Cross Road, Portrush Road, Glen Osmond Road intersection with the South Eastern Freeway to just east of the Crafers Interchange).

The purpose of these gates is to provide formalised crossover points which allow for temporary, contraflow traffic movements. They will assist in keeping traffic moving in the event of an incident (that requires up-track or down-track lane closures), during road maintenance activities or in response to emergency management.

Planning continues on the development of a concept of operations and concept design for the infrastructure required to implement such a treatment.

As part of this work the Department for Infrastructure and Transport is looking into the application and operation of the types of gates, and supporting infrastructure, used along similar motorway corridors within other jurisdictions. A detailed analysis of congestion and incidents along the freeway is being undertaken, with gates to be located on the basis of incident history and on/off ramp locations to maximise efficiency of the emergency response and congestion management.

Dividend and Income Tax Equivalent (ITE) payments made by SA Water to the general government sector are forecast to increase from $57.7 million in 2021-22 to $139.1 million in 2022-23. This largely reflects additional revenue received by SA Water for works undertaken on behalf of the Department of Infrastructure and Transport (DIT) associated with water and sewerage infrastructure impacted by major road projects. Expenditure incurred by SA Water for these works is capitalised to reflect the investing nature of the works, in contrast, revenue received for these works are recorded as operating revenue.

Additional revenue budgeted to be received by SA Water from DIT in 2022-23 includes:

- $30.3 million for the Victor Harbor Road Duplication Project;
- $24.9 million for Main South Road Duplication Project; and Vehicle claim numbers were higher than usual in the 2021-22 financial year due to the hail storm which occurred in October 2021.

Note this data excludes SAPOL vehicles, as SAFA does not manage these claims.

WORKFORCE SUMMARY

In reply to Mr COWDREY (Colton) (17 June 2022). (Estimates Committee B)

The Hon. S.C. MULLIGHAN (Lee—Treasurer): I have been advised:

The Department of Treasury and Finance's (DTF) workforce summary reported in Budget Paper 4 is detailed in the table below:

Full-Time Equivalent Employees as at 30 June
	2022-23 Budget	2021-22 Estimated Result
Department of Treasury and Finance	1 506.9	1 471.9

The net increase of 35 FTEs in 2022-23 is primarily due to higher Super SA staff numbers due to an increase in operations, including the implementation of the choice of fund and limited public offer of superannuation services. This increase is the replacement of temporary staff who have been working on these transformation projects with full time employees (43.1 FTE).

Partially offset by staff reductions of 8.0 FTE across the department associated with departmental efficiencies.

The TVSPs accepted in 2021-22 are detailed in the following table:

	Headcount	FTEs
TVSPs taken as at 30 June 2022	6.0	5.4

DTF is currently considering further TVSP requests. It is not yet clear how many of these requests DTF will accept during 2022-23.

It is not possible to project how much will be paid in medical malpractice claims in 2022-23, as claims develop over many years following an incident and the timing of settlements is based on individual circumstances, including factors which are outside SAFA's direct control.

2. As indicated above, it is not possible to provide a projection for 2022-23.

3. During 2021-22, four medical malpractice claims were settled. During 2020-21, eight claims were settled and in 2019-20 nine claims were settled. At 1 July 2022, SAFA was managing a total of 60 medical malpractice claims.

EFFICIENCY DIVIDEND

In reply to Mr COWDREY (Colton) (17 June 2022). (Estimates Committee B)

The Hon. S.C. MULLIGHAN (Lee—Treasurer): The following information is provided on behalf of all Ministers:

New savings introduced as part of the 2022-23 budget are set out, by agency, in the 2022-23 Budget Measures Statement. The Budget Measures Statement provides information on both the dollar amounts by year and, where relevant, details on how these savings are to be achieved.

The government has made it clear that in the case of the operating efficiency measure, that chief executives will have flexibility to deliver the savings in a manner that best suits the needs of the agency. Savings do not need to include FTE reductions and a range of options can be pursued including reducing expenditure on consultants, contractors, marketing, communications, accommodation, travel, and other goods and services.

EXECUTIVE POSITIONS

In reply to Mr COWDREY (Colton) (17 June 2022). (Estimates Committee B)

The Hon. S.C. MULLIGHAN (Lee—Treasurer): The following information is provided on behalf of all Ministers:

The executive reduction target has been notionally allocated to agencies as follows:

Agency	Executive saving allocation (FTEs)
Attorney-General's Department	6.0
Defence SA	1.0
Department for Correctional Services	1.0
Department for Energy and Mining	1.0
Department for Environment and Water	2.0
Department for Infrastructure and Transport	8.0
Department for Industry, Innovation and Science	7.0
Department for Trade and Investment	2.0
Department of Human Services	2.0

Department of Treasury and Finance	3.0
Renewal SA	2.0
SA Housing Authority	1.0
SA Water	2.0
South Australian Tourism Commission	1.0
TOTAL	50.0

The $41.5 million saving associated with the reduction in executives was allocated to agencies as part of their operating efficiency measure, and as such there are no specific targets regarding the remuneration levels of the reductions or specific dates by which it is necessary that the positions are cut. Agencies will need to deliver their allocated financial savings.

UNCOMMITTED CAPITAL

In reply to Mr COWDREY (Colton) (17 June 2022). (Estimates Committee B)

The Hon. S.C. MULLIGHAN (Lee—Treasurer): The following information is provided on behalf of all Ministers:

The 2022-23 Budget announced new investing expenditure initiatives in the general government sector totalling $3.4 billion over the period 2022-23 to 2025-26, in addition to $44 million in 2021-22. These were partially funded by $761 million of revenue, mainly reflecting initiatives that would be partially funded by the commonwealth government.

The unallocated investing contingency provision (and its use) is not budgeted at an agency or project level, rather it is adjusted at a whole of government level as part of the annual budget process. While the government has used some of the budgeted investing contingency provision to support its budget initiatives, it has retained an appropriate level of unallocated investing contingency provisions for future budgets.

Details of each of the individual investing initiatives funded in the 2022-23 budget are presented, by agency, in the 2022-23 Budget Measures Statement.

FULL-TIME EQUIVALENTS

In reply to Mr COWDREY (Colton) (17 June 2022). (Estimates Committee B)

The Hon. S.C. MULLIGHAN (Lee—Treasurer): The following information is provided on behalf of all Ministers:

The FTE count for each agency at 30 June 2022 will be published in the Office of the Commissioner for Public Sector Employment's Workforce Information Report for 2021-22 towards the end of 2022.

Each Agency Statement provides an estimate for the budget year (2022-23) of FTEs for the agency. As the FTE numbers are notional across the forward estimates, FTEs are not included by individual agency in budget statements.

The total employment cost and FTE levels for each year of the forward estimates can be found in Tables 2.8 and 2.9 respectively of the 2022-23 Budget Statement.

While each agency has a savings task over the forward estimates, any FTE reductions associated with this task are notional and based on estimates of how the savings across the forward estimates may be delivered. Chief executives have the flexibility to deliver the savings in the manner that best suits the needs of the agency.

The government does not have a TVSP target for FTEs. The budget includes a provision of $56 million in 2022-23 to support agencies in meeting the costs of TVSPs and/or separation payments up to 31 January 2023.

NEW HOUSES, COST

In reply to Ms PRATT (Frome) (20 June 2022). (Estimates Committee B)

The Hon. N.F. COOK (Hurtle Vale—Minister for Human Services): I have been advised:

The cost of building public housing has, in line with the broader construction industry, increased significantly over the past two years. Currently, costs in metropolitan areas range between $220,000 and $280,000 for a two- to four-bedroom home, and between $250,000 and $320,000 for two- to three-bedroom apartments. These costs differ in regional areas, with increases varying between 5 per cent and 18 per cent depending on the location and distance from Adelaide. This is a result of transport costs and trade availability. Costs are subject to further change and escalation rates.

MAINTENANCE SOFTWARE SYSTEM

In reply to Ms PRATT (Frome) (20 June 2022). (Estimates Committee B)

The Hon. N.F. COOK (Hurtle Vale—Minister for Human Services): I have been advised:

The SA Housing Authority has a register of maintenance work orders for public housing in the Connect system, implemented in April 2020. Connect receives regular updates as part of systems improvement processes and does not require substantial upgrades.

Connect uses existing interfaces with maintenance contractors and the maintenance call centre.

COPPER THEFT

In reply to Ms PRATT (Frome) (20 June 2022). (Estimates Committee B)

The Hon. N.F. COOK (Hurtle Vale—Minister for Human Services): I have been advised:

HOMELESSNESS RATE

In reply to Ms PRATT (Frome) (20 June 2022). (Estimates Committee B)

The Hon. N.F. COOK (Hurtle Vale—Minister for Human Services): I have been advised:

South Australia established five alliances in July 2021. A reduction in client numbers for Specialist Homelessness Services (SHS) was recorded from July 2021, with numbers returning to historical averages by September 2021.

Month	Total SHS Clients
May 2021	6,360
Jun 2021	6,532
Jul 2021	5,225
Aug 2021	6,125
Sep 2021	6,357
Oct 2021	6,543

Clients transitioning to new providers had their records closed and subsequently reopened with their new provider following appropriate client consent processes.

Further detailed reporting regarding the number of rough sleepers in Adelaide, including notes regarding data impacts as a result of the transition to the alliance model, is available from the South Australian Alliance to End Homelessness website at saaeh.org.au/progress-dashboard.

CODE BLUE

In reply to Ms PRATT (Frome) (20 June 2022). (Estimates Committee B)

Under this arrangement, specialist homelessness services can seek reimbursement for expenses such as salaries, accommodation, transport, and other consumables associated with a Code Blue / Code Red activation.

ROADS OF STRATEGIC IMPORTANCE, RENMARK TO GAWLER

In reply to Mr TARZIA (Hartley) (17 June 2022). (Estimates Committee A)

The Hon. G.G. BROCK (Stuart—Minister for Local Government, Minister for Regional Roads, Minister for Veterans Affairs): I have been advised:

The Australian and South Australian governments have committed $87.5 million on an 80:20 basis, for upgrades to the Sturt Highway between Renmark and Gawler. Upgrades include:

- Junction improvements at Sturt Highway and Old Sturt Highway on the western end near Barmera and the eastern end near Monash;
- Four new overtaking lanes and overtaking lane extensions between Annadale and Barmera;
- Pavement renewal between Nuriootpa and Truro, and between Barmera and Monash;
- Safety barrier upgrades at targeted locations between Truro and Renmark; and
- Five new and upgraded rest areas between Shea-Oak Log and Kingston on Murray for improved fatigue management.

The above works on Sturt Highway commenced in 2020 and are expected to be completed by mid-2024.

ROADS OF STRATEGIC IMPORTANCE, EYRE PENINSULA ROAD UPGRADES

In reply to Mr TARZIA (Hartley) (17 June 2022). (Estimates Committee A)

The Hon. G.G. BROCK (Stuart—Minister for Local Government, Minister for Regional Roads, Minister for Veterans Affairs): I have been advised:

The Roads of Strategic Importance (ROSI) program is an initiative of the Australian government which aims to deliver improvements to freight movements, support regional economic growth and connectivity, and improved safety for all road users. Upgrades of rural road corridors that fall under this program within South Australia include Sturt Highway, Barrier Highway and Eyre Highway.

A funding commitment of $51.25 million, with Australian and state government funding provided on an 80:20 basis, has been made to upgrade the Eyre Peninsula roads expected to be impacted by the closure of the Eyre Peninsula rail network.

Upgrades across the Eyre Peninsula network to date include:

Safety Works

- Hazard protection/installation of guard rail along curves on the Birdseye Highway between Cleve and Cowell—completed December 2020.

Shoulder Sealing

- Birdseye Highway – Cleve to Rudall (approximately 21 kilometres) and high priority areas between Cowell and Cleve to achieve the desired one-metre shoulder—completed in 2020.
- Tod Highway – high priority areas between Lock and Karkoo, Wanilla and Flinders Highway (approximately 25 kilometres)—completed April 2021.
- Lincoln Highway – high priority areas between Whyalla and the Birdseye Highway (approximately 16 kilometres)—completed April 2021.

Overtaking Lanes

- Lincoln Highway – two new overtaking lanes between Tumby Bay (open to traffic April 2022) and Louth Bay (open to traffic July 2022).
- Western Approach Road – one new descending lane near Pine Freezers Road including upgrade of the Pine Freezers Road junction (open to traffic July 2022).

- Flinders Highway – one new auxiliary lane between Flinders Highway near Forest Road and Tod Highway (open to traffic July 2022).

Anticipated works include:

Pavement Works

- Pavement renewal works along Liverpool Street (Mortlock Terrace to Porter Street), Porter Street (Edithburgh Street to Tasman Terrace) and Mortlock Terrace/Porter Street roundabout.

Overtaking Lanes

- Tod Highway – one new overtaking lane south of Cummins. Further investigations are currently underway for the proposed location, including the need to seek approval under the Environment Protection and Biodiversity Conservation Act 1999 due to significant environmental impacts that result from protected flora and fauna species existing along the length of this corridor.

Intersection Improvements

- Upgrading the intersections along Liverpool Street with a focus on improving pedestrian crossing safety. The Department for Infrastructure and Transport continues to work with the City of Port Lincoln to resolve preferred treatments for these intersections.

EFFICIENCY DIVIDEND TARGETS SAVINGS

In reply to Mr TELFER (Flinders) (20 June 2022). (Estimates Committee A)

The Hon. G.G. BROCK (Stuart—Minister for Local Government, Minister for Regional Roads, Minister for Veterans Affairs): I have been advised:

As part of the 2022-23 state budget, operational efficiencies of $86,000 have been attributed to the Office of Local Government program (2022-23 figure). This is 1 per cent of the total $8,481,000 total expenses.

OFFICE OF LOCAL GOVERNMENT

In reply to Mr TELFER (Flinders) (20 June 2022). (Estimates Committee A)

The Hon. G.G. BROCK (Stuart—Minister for Local Government, Minister for Regional Roads, Minister for Veterans Affairs): I have been advised:

The 0.6 FTE change is related to changes in the allocation of corporate support overheads.

COUNCIL MEMBER CONDUCT FRAMEWORK, ESTABLISHMENT COSTS

In reply to Mr TELFER (Flinders) (20 June 2022). (Estimates Committee A)

The Hon. G.G. BROCK (Stuart—Minister for Local Government, Minister for Regional Roads, Minister for Veterans Affairs): I have been advised:

As required by the Local Government Act 1999, all costs associated with the establishment and operation of the Behaviour Standards Panel (the panel) are met by the Local Government Association (LGA).

I am advised that the LGA is working closely with the Office of Local Government (OLG) on the establishment of the panel and receives regular updates on costs incurred. Those costs to date primarily reflect the cost of the three panel members' time. The presiding member is reimbursed at a rate of $64.50 per hour and the two other members are reimbursed at a rate of $51.50.

The panel is currently meeting monthly to prepare for the formal commencement of its functions in November this year. To date, four establishment meetings have been held, at a cost of $2,769. This cost reflects the members' time in preparing for and attending these meetings.

I am advised that there are a further four establishment meetings scheduled before November, and that it is anticipated that the costs for these remaining meetings will be similar to those held to date.

Other costs for the panel establishment may include costs incurred for legal advice and administrative tasks that must be undertaken to ensure its proper operation upon its formal commencement. As stated above, the LGA is closely involved with all of these tasks and will therefore be fully aware of costs incurred and the reasons for them.

As the panel's formal functions have yet to commence, it is difficult to estimate the costs of its ongoing operations accurately, also noting that these costs will largely depend on the number of complaints it receives.

ESSENTIAL SERVICES COMMISSION OF SOUTH AUSTRALIA

In reply to Mr TELFER (Flinders) (20 June 2022). (Estimates Committee A)

The Hon. G.G. BROCK (Stuart—Minister for Local Government, Minister for Regional Roads, Minister for Veterans Affairs): I have been advised:

The Statutes Amendment (Local Government Review) Act 2021 establishes a local government rates oversight scheme, which commenced on 30 April 2022.

Under this scheme, the Essential Services Commission of South Australia (ESCOSA) will provide independent advice to each council every four years on the appropriateness of council revenue and rating decisions within the context of their long-term financial planning.

In March 2022, ESCOSA released its Draft Framework and Approach for the scheme for public consultation, which concluded on 27 May 2022.

The draft framework set out the methodology by which ESCOSA proposes to deliver the rates oversight scheme. It sets out the legal framework in which the scheme has been developed, outlines ESCOSA's expected approach to the advice it will provide councils, and the information that councils must provide to ESCOSA every four years.

Reflecting the intent of the scheme for ESCOSA to provide independent advice to councils, ESCOSA will engage directly with the local government sector as the new scheme is implemented. Accordingly, I have not provided feedback or guidance to ESCOSA on the scope of the review proposed in the draft Framework and Approach.

ESSENTIAL SERVICES COMMISSION OF SOUTH AUSTRALIA

In reply to Mr TELFER (Flinders) (20 June 2022). (Estimates Committee A)

The Hon. G.G. BROCK (Stuart—Minister for Local Government, Minister for Regional Roads, Minister for Veterans Affairs): I have been advised:

In March 2022, the Essential Services Commission of South Australia (ESCOSA) released its Draft Framework and Approach for the scheme for public consultation, which concluded on 27 May 2022.

I am advised that the Local Government Association (LGA) prepared a consultation paper and has sought submissions from councils to inform a sector wide response to ESCOSA on the draft Framework and Approach. I have not formally received a copy of the LGA's submission to ESCOSA, however, I understand that the LGA has raised concerns about the proposed costs of the scheme.

I understand that the LGA is working with ESCOSA to ensure that the work ESCOSA will undertake is reasonable and will provide value for money for all councils.

It is important to note that the provision of independent, quality information and advice will assist councils to fulfil their responsibility for good financial management and will also provide an independent assessment for local communities to better understand the decisions that their councils make, and particularly decisions on the rates that councils collect in order to deliver their services.

SOUTH AUSTRALIAN LOCAL GOVERNMENT GRANTS COMMISSION

In reply to Mr TELFER (Flinders) (20 June 2022). (Estimates Committee A)

The Hon. G.G. BROCK (Stuart—Minister for Local Government, Minister for Regional Roads, Minister for Veterans Affairs): I have been advised:

Changes in the annual allocation of financial assistance grants from the Australian government occur annually as a result of increases in the pool of funding determined by the Australian government in accordance with the commonwealth Local Government (Financial Assistance) Act 1995.

The annual increase in funding from the Australian government is determined by taking into account the estimated annual increase in the population of each state or territory according to the Australian Bureau of Statistics, and the forecasted increase in the consumer price index. Initial estimates of the coming year's grant pool are determined following the federal budget and finalised in the first week in July.

Recommended allocations of grant funding to individual councils within South Australia are made by the SA Local Government Grants Commission (the Commission). Each year, the Minister for Local Government reviews the commission's recommendations, which, following ministerial endorsement, are then provided to the commonwealth minister for approval.

Approved grant allocations to individual councils may vary according to changes in the methodology applied by the commission. However, the annual total allocation of financial assistance grants from the Australian government to South Australia is not influenced by changes in the commission's methodology.

SCHOOL-BASED APPRENTICES AND TRAINEES

In reply to the Hon. J.A.W. GARDNER (Morialta—Deputy Leader of the Opposition) (22 June 2022). (Estimates Committee A)

The Hon. B.I. BOYER (Wright—Minister for Education, Training and Skills): I have been advised of the following:

The latest publicly available figures show that as at end of September 2021 there were 2450 school-based trainees and apprentices in training in South Australia. This is taken from the National Centre for Vocational Education Research (NCVER) National Apprentice and Trainee Collection September quarter 2021.

There is not a current target in terms of a specific number of school-based apprentices and trainees across all industry sectors.

The Department for Education will continue to engage with industry, including through the South Australian Skills Commission, to determine and respond to the skills needs of South Australian businesses.

In reply to the Hon. J.A.W. GARDNER (Morialta—Deputy Leader of the Opposition) (22 June 2022). (Estimates Committee A)

CAPITAL WORKS ASSISTANCE SCHEME

In reply to the Hon. J.A.W. GARDNER (Morialta—Deputy Leader of the Opposition) (22 June 2022). (Estimates Committee A)

The Hon. B.I. BOYER (Wright—Minister for Education, Training and Skills): I have been advised of the following:

The capital works assistance scheme has a recurrent budget of $3.6m per annum (indexed). When funding from the capital works assistance scheme is approved for a school's project, the budget is transferred from this budget line and reported against the school's capital works project, and this funding then forms part of the total project cost for that project.

The $155,000 budget in 2022-23 reflects that $3.450m of the capital works assistance scheme program has been allocated to approved school projects and $155,000 is still available.

TAFE SA REINSTATED COURSES, STUDENT NUMBERS

In reply to the Hon. J.A.W. GARDNER (Morialta—Deputy Leader of the Opposition) (22 June 2022).
(Estimates Committee A)

The Hon. B.I. BOYER (Wright—Minister for Education, Training and Skills): I have been advised of the following:

The number of trainees engaged in the courses, as opposed to those accessing through only campus-based delivery, will vary. Historically, the trainee student cohort for these courses comprised less than 5 per cent of total students. TAFE SA's modelling anticipates that future demand will be consistent with historical trends.

In relation to the Certificate III Individual Support, TAFE SA offers two specialisations: aged care and disability care. TAFE SA forecasts around 110 student commencements in the Certificate III Individual Support (Aging) and 60 commencements in the Certificate III Individual Support (Disability) during 2022-23. This represents approximately 25 per cent of the 640 students in the courses being reinstated.

As part of the process of reinstating these courses, TAFE SA will be work closely with the community services sector to ensure training delivery aligns to industry needs.

COUNTRY FIRE SERVICE, COLD BURNS

In reply to Mr PEDERICK (Hammond) (22 June 22). (Estimates Committee B)

The Hon. J.K. SZAKACS (Cheltenham—Minister for Police, Emergency Services and Correctional Services): I have been advised:

The South Australian Country Fire Service works with the Department for Environment and Water, which is the lead agency for prescribed burning in South Australia, to support the delivery of bushfire hazard reduction activities.

For the first time in 2022, Bushfire Management Committees (BMCs) are preparing bushfire risk reduction plans which will document works for 2022-2023 proposed by all agencies involved in the BMCs to reduce risk to assets identified in Bushfire Management Area Plans as being at very high and extreme risk from bushfire. These activities are not limited to but include prescribed burning. As such, the plans will include prescribed burns scheduled for 2022-2023.

The risk reduction plans will be drafted during July and August and following endorsement by the chief executives of member agencies undertaking the activities, will then be reviewed and endorsed by both the relevant BMC and the State Bushfire Coordination Committee (SBCC). The plans will then be published on the SBCC website later in the year.

COUNTRY FIRE SERVICE, STAFF DEVELOPMENT FRAMEWORK

In reply to Mr PEDERICK (Hammond) (22 June 22). (Estimates Committee B)

The Hon. J.K. SZAKACS (Cheltenham—Minister for Police, Emergency Services and Correctional Services): I have been advised:

The staff development framework (SDF) is a career development strategy that provides all South Australia Metropolitan Fire Service (MFS) operational personnel with access to nationally recognised competency-based training. The SDF was one of the first such strategies to be developed and implemented within the Australasian fire and emergency services industry.

Personnel are enrolled in the SDF during MFS recruit course. Enrolment is then mandatory in annual SDF programs for the first six years of a firefighter's career. Further participation is voluntary but is a prerequisite for promotion to officer ranks. The SDF also articulates into and provides access to tertiary and graduate levels programs to ensure organisational leaders receive development opportunities and qualifications commensurate with equivalent government and private sector organisations.

The development, delivery and ongoing review of the SDF requires that the MFS maintains registered training organisation (RTO) status and compliance against the Australian Quality Training Framework (AQTF). The MFS also maintains partnerships and collaborative arrangements with a range of vocational and tertiary institutions, the Australasian Fire Authorities Council (AFAC) and emergency service organisations, police and ambulance services.

Management and delivery of the SDF is dependent on a range of methodologies and technologies. These include data management systems required for RTO compliance, incident command simulation technologies necessary to develop officers, and technology dependent infrastructure such as the new Angle Park Structure Fire Training Facility. Increasingly, distance-based learning technologies are required to enable operational personnel to complete training requirements at their stations and remotely when required.

The broad strategy and content of the SDF were developed through extensive analysis of the community requirements of the MFS and its personnel, comprehensive role analysis of all MFS ranks, and consultation and collaboration with the United Firefighters Union (SA).

SDF content, development, delivery, and assessment strategies are regularly reviewed to ensure they continue to meet the needs of the community, the evolving roles of MFS personnel, emergency service and training industry current practice, and also align to government and agency priorities.

I have been advised that a review of the funding formula of the School Community Library program is currently underway to ensure the ongoing sustainability of the program. LICENCE TRANSFERS

In reply to Mr TEAGUE (Heysen) (23 June 2022). (Estimates Committee B)

The Hon. A. MICHAELS (Enfield—Minister for Small and Family Business, Minister for Consumer and Business Affairs, Minister for Arts): I have been advised:

New liquor licence applications decreased by 12 per cent to 519 in 2021-22 from 590 in 2020-21. This slight decline can likely be attributed to higher numbers of packaged liquor sales and an increase in liquor production and sales licences during 2020-21 when many home liquor businesses were established as a result of COVID-19.

The number of applications to transfer licences has remained the same over 2020-21 and 2021-22.

There was a notable decrease in licence variations due to changes to liquor licensing fees in 2020-21 resulting in a number of licensees applying to downgrade their trading hours and capacities to reduce their fees.

LICENCE ISSUANCE

In reply to Mr TEAGUE (Heysen) (23 June 2022). (Estimates Committee B)

The Hon. A. MICHAELS (Enfield—Minister for Small and Family Business, Minister for Consumer and Business Affairs, Minister for Arts): I have been advised:

In 2021-22, 590 applications for new licences were received in comparison to 519 in 2020-21.

353 applications for transfer were received in both 2020-21 and 2021-22.

In 2021-22, 210 applications to vary licences were received in comparison to 88 in 2020-21.

As the total number of liquor licence applications incorporates a broad range of application types including surrenders, exemptions, redefinitions and revocations, the figures for new applications, transfers and variations do not equate to the total number of applications reflected in the Budget Agency Statements.

In addition, the figures provided above relate to actual activity in 2021-22, while the Budget Agency Statements reflect projected figures.

In reply to Mr TELFER (Flinders) (23 June 2022). (Estimates Committee B)

The Hon. A. MICHAELS (Enfield—Minister for Small and Family Business, Minister for Consumer and Business Affairs, Minister for Arts): I have been advised that for units under my responsibility within the Attorney-General's Department:

Business units are expected to minimise expenditure on consultancies, with the engagement of a consultant only to be made in specialised circumstances, and on an as needs basis.

It is estimated that expenditure on consultancies in 2022-23 is likely to be less than $50,000.

No external consultants that have been engaged at a total estimated cost above $10,000 for 2022-23.

The majority of expenditure on contractors is related to the engagement of temporary labour hire. Business units are expected to minimise expenditure on contractors, with the engagement of contractors on an 'as needs' basis to assist with managing vacancies and turnover in the workforce.

It is estimated that expenditure on contractors in 2022-23 may be approximately $100,000.
